EMPHATIC LANGUAGE USED IN DOCUMENTS

PARTY SPOKESMEN HOTLY DEBATE ISSUE

Smoot Denies Harrison Assertion That Flood of Complaints Is Unprecedented.

Governments and commercial interests of three continents expressed concern over proposed increases in American tariff rates in communications made public yesterday by the Senate Finance Committee.

They included approximately fifty notes and letters from twenty-five nations and their colonies spread over Europe, Asia and South and Central America. They were forwarded to the committee for its consideration by the State Department.

Some of the documents were couched in emphatic language, especially a note from the Spanish Government, which threatened "denouncement" of the existing most-favored-nation trade relations with the United States should various rates now in the House bill become law. Others were more mildly phrased.

The notes came from Great Britain, Australia, India, British East Indies, Bahamas, Bermuda, Island of Dominica, Irish Free State, France, Italy, Spain, Belgium, Mexico, Austria, Turkey, Norway, Greece, The Netherlands, Denmark, Switzerland, Persia, Uruguay, Dominican Republic, Guatemala and Honduras.

Consideration Is Asked.

The general tenor of the protests and comments was a plea for consideration of the trade relations between the communicants and the United States in the revision process. Trade balances now existing in favor of this country were emphasized and fear expressed over the possibility of decreased purchasing power through higher tariffs curtailing shipments to the United States.

Publication of the documents precipitated a sharp clash between Democrats and Republicans, the former charging and the latter denying that the complaints represented world-wide resentment over the House measure.

While agreeing that foreign protests were not unusual when American tariff revisions were in progress, the Democrats declared such a flood of foreign reaction never before was experienced.

Chairman Smoot minimized the situation, denied a statement by Senator Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, that 38 nations had protested, and contended the Democrats would vote for rates even higher than those now carried in the bill on certain agricultural products with which the notes deal at length.

Pretense Is Claimed.

"Who is so simple as to believe there will be a duty on bananas or coffee or an increase on most of the items named," he asked.

After reading Senator Smoot's statement, Senator Harrison issued another declaring the chairman attempted to "hide behind the assertion that most of the protests filed are against increases on agricultural products."

"That is a sham and pretense," Harrison said, adding that fourteen nations had protested as governments and had not confined their complaints to one or two articles, but to a long list of commodities.

"Referring to a summary of the communications issued from Senator Smoot's office, the Mississippi senator declared it was hoped that the "full texts of these protests will be published and not partisan summaries by the chairman of the finance committee."

Spain protested against increased duties on cork, olives, grapes, onions, dried fruits and revolvers. Certain sanitary restrictive measures already in effect were said to have brought about a situation which would be considerably aggravated, should the proposed increases become law.

Details of Protests Bared.

The note signed by Primo de Rivera, the Spanish foreign minister, called attention also to the "unfavorable" trade balance against Spain and asserted unless moderation were shown as to the tariff Spain would find itself obliged to proceed to the denouncement of the existing modus vivendi.

An opinion by Secretary Mellon, attached to the Spanish document, declared the Treasury was without authority to give Spanish imports any more favorable treatment than is given imports from other countries, but "if the importers of Spanish products feel that they are being discrimi-

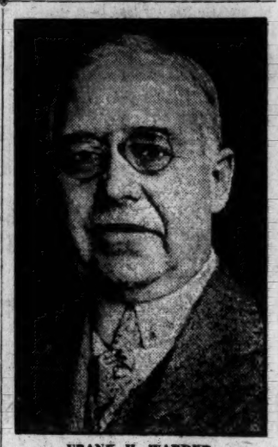
Huge Bank Collapse Laid to State Official

Jurist And Others Hit For Shielding Ferrari in $7,000,000 Crash.



FRANK H. WARDER.

New York, July 10 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Mincing at neither words, names nor facts, Moreland Act Commissioner Robert Moses calls the roll of those he holds criminally and morally responsible for the $7,000,000 failure of the City Trust Co. and suggests drastic changes in the State banking laws to prevent the recurrence of similar catastrophes in his report to Gov. Roosevelt made public today.

The chief culprit as revealed in the report is Frank H. Warder, former State banking superintendent, characterized by Mr. Moses as "a faithless public official who accepted gifts and gratuities including money and securities, knew of the dishonest management and bad conditions in the Ferrari banks and deliberately prevented exposure and proper official action."

Warder, charged by the Moreland investigators with a felony and two misdemeanors, is under $12,000 bail awaiting action by the special grand jury which convenes July 22. Five other persons have been arrested and held for possible indictments.

But aside from these, Mr. Moses calls to account in vigorous and uncompromising language, the group of politically prominent men who profited by their close association with Ferrari and his enterprises, yet escaped criminal prosecution because of loopholes in the law and because the investigators were unable to unearth sufficient evidence

REFUEL FLIERS, IN 204TH HOUR, REFUSE TO QUIT

Angeleno Roars On Steadily as Californians Pass Ninth Day Aloft.

EMPTY TANK AVOIDED WITH HASTY CONTACT

AIRPLANE'S BUILDERS MAKE $1,000 AWARDS

Record Holders Request Light Gas Load to Enable Them to Get Above Fog.

Culver City, Calif., July 10 (A.P.).—The 200th hour in the air, much sought but never before attained objective of endurance fliers, was passed by the aviators, L. W. Mendell and R. B. Reinhart in the biplane Angeleno at 3:29 p. m. today. Their ship was performing as smoothly as at any time in the flight.

Shortly before 5:30 p. m. the aviators frantically signaled for more fuel, having flown past a regular fueling hour. The Angeleno's tanks were nearly dry when the refueling plane made contact and transferred 100 gallons.

The stubby-winger ship pounded away on a monotonous circle of the field. Spectators came, stood in wonderment, and departed.

As the 200th hour of the flight flitted by a white missive was dropped. Scribed across its grease-stained surface was a terse request for more gasoline.

"Tell that crowd if they wanta see us land, to come back next Tuesday. We gonna stay up another hundred hours," it ended.

Food Let Down by Rope.

A refueling ship shot up, lowered its hose, and, with the contact made, sent 100 gallons of gasoline into the Angeleno. Next a dangling rope was caught by the fliers and in thermos bottles and sacks their dinner of soup, coffee and fried chicken was delivered.

During the day the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, builders of the plane's motor, announced an award of $1,000 to each of the fliers. The 220-horse power plant has driven the cabin ship more than 16,000 miles during nearly nine days in the air.

As the biplane completed its 203rd hour in the air at 6:29:30 p. m., the pilots dropped the following note:

"Will take on light load. Looks like a low fog tonight. Will want an early morning refueling. Everything O. K."

The "light load," to be taken on about 7 o'clock, was believed by ground officials to indicate that the pilots wanted to be able to fly above the expected fog.

Fliers Light-Hearted.

The black plane swung round the field in varying circles, and at each refueling the nonchalant, light-hearted gestures of the fliers indicated their spirits apparently were no nearer the breaking point than the roaring cylinders of their 220-horsepower motor.

"If they are going to stay up until the motor wears out, they will have a long stay," said W. E. "Tommy" Thomas, president of the Professional Pilots Association here, and veteran motor expert. It was under his supervision that the second-hand motor, identical with the 220-horsepower air-cooled type used in the Army endurance tri-motored plane Question Mark, was reconditioned and made ready for the flight.

Motor Gets Better, Claim.

"The motor is purring in better shape than when they started," Thomas continued. "Its gas consumption is lower, indicating better performance. I don't expect to see them down before Sunday and perhaps not then."

The motor had some 480 hours in the air before this flight and the second-hand biplane itself has traveled some 15,000 miles in this air voyage.

A telegram congratulating the aviators was received today from Byron K. Newcomb and Roy L. Mitchell, of Cleveland, former holders of the endurance mark. It read:

"Great work, boys. Your new mark is in keeping with the stride of aviation. We hope that you stay up many more hours and give us a real figure to aim at next time."

BLUE SABBATH FIGHT CARRIED UP TO HOOVER

SUNDAY IS DECLARED TO BE TIME FOR REST

Delegation Voices Belief Law Would Cause Crime Decrease.

EXECUTIVE GRACIOUS, BUT NONCOMMITAL

Opponents Mapping Fight on Move by the Lord's Day Alliance.

A new fight over proposed Sunday closing or "blue law" legislation for Washington broke around the head of President Hoover yesterday, and the prospect was that unless he sidesteps it will plague him for many a day.

Early yesterday a delegation representing the Lord's Day Alliance, which included, among other clerics, Bishop James Cannon, jr., Methodist leader of Virginia, called at the White House and urged President Hoover to support the proposed legislation.

Later in the day the National Association Opposed to Blue Laws issued a statement in which it announced that it also would send a delegation to the White House in order that President Hoover might get its side of the issue.

"We can not imagine," said Linn Gale, secretary of the association, "that President Hoover, a super-engineer, with the viewpoint of the twentieth century industrialist, will seriously consider indulging a measure to bar Sunday movies, baseball, golf and other amusements.

"We do not intend to allow this audacious appeal to go unanswered."

Bill Pending Ten Years.

A bill to end "commercialization" of the Sabbath in the National Capital has been pending in Con[illegible] for ten years or more. The agitation for its passage, however, did not reach its heighth until 1927 when extensive hearings were held on the Lankford bill.

At one point in the hearings Representative Sol Bloom, of New York, an opponent of blue laws, and former Representative Thomas Blantor, of Texas, an advocate of the legislation, almost became involved in a fist fight.

Although the President received the delegation from the Lord's Day Alliance graciously yesterday, he did not commit himself on the Sunday-closing proposal.

A memorial left with the President by the Rev. David G. Wylie, president of the Lord's Day Alliance, said in part:

"The alliance stands for the weekly day of rest, whether called Sabbath, Lord's Day or Sunday. We believe firmly, Mr. President, that the weekly day of rest is one of God's best benedictions to a weary world. It comes after six days of toil and fatigue, like light after darkness, spring after winter, peace after war.

Crime Argument Advanced.

"The proper observance of the day lessens crime, which has become a national disgrace. The day is one of the pillars of the republic.

"We are of the opinion that the District of Columbia should have a law forbidding unnecessary work on Sunday and thus giving the citizens rest from toil.

"It seems reasonable that the home of the Nation's Capital should set a good example to all our people. We beseech your great influence in the movement to have Congress enact a Sunday law for the District of Columbia."

Others in the delegation, beside Bishop Cannon and the Rev. Wylie, were Canon William Sheafe Chase, of Brooklyn; H. L. Bowlby, of New York; the Rev. W. S. Abernethy, of this city; the Rev. E. L. Crawford, secretary of the Methodist Board of Prohibition Temperance and Morals; the Rev. George F. Bentley, the Rev. Andrew S. Bird, Edgar B. Henderson and Colin H. Livingston.

Warner Will Work On Crime Research

Appointment to Hoover's Enforcement Body Is Announced.

(Associated Press.)

Appointment of Prof. Sam Bass Warner, of Syracuse University, to aid in research work was announced today by President Hoover's Law Enforcement Commission.

Prof. Warner was formerly a lawyer in San Francisco and has served on the faculties at Oregon and Northwestern Universities. Next year he is to become a member of the Institute of Criminal Law at Harvard University.

He has had wide experience in the crime research field and has aided in compilation of statistics for the Government.

BOSTON AND NEW YORK MEN NEW MASTERS OF CAPITAL GAS COMPANY

Mystery Concerning Control of Utility Will Be Dispelled Today.

COMMISSION TO GET FINANCIERS' NAMES

Leader of Interests Will Present Statement of Ownership.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS TO MEET TOMORROW

Several Changes in Personnel and New Policy Expected to Be Announced.

Boston and New York financiers will be revealed today as the new masters of the Washington Gas Light Co., it was learned last night by The Post.

The mystery that has enveloped the passing of control of the gas company from local to out-of-town interests will be swept away this morning when F. S. Burroughs, an officer of Harris-Forbes & Co., a big New York investment house, appears before Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission.

Burroughs, an outstanding figure among the twenty or so who have gained control of the local company, will submit to Gen. Patrick a sworn statement containing the names of the Boston and New York men who are involved.

Bostonians in Control.

The Bostonians, it is understood, dominate the group, they having bought up more of the stock than the New Yorkers. Until now it has been thought that the men behind the big deal were all in New York.

Tomorrow morning there will be an important meeting of the board of directors of the Washington Gas Light Co., the first that has been held since the Boston-New York interests gained control of the company.

It is expected that at this meeting several changes in the personnel of the board will be ordered and that a new policy will be formulated, one designed to win quick favor with the consumers of gas here.

Burroughs comes here today with full authority to speak for his colleagues. This authority was given him at a meeting in New York three days ago, at which were present the principals among the new stockholders.

Lambert Also Present.

Present also was Wilton Lambert, of this city, one of the attorneys for the group and a new director in the Washington Gas Light Co. After the meeting, Lambert continued on to Swampscott, Mass., but he is expected to be here for the directors meeting tomorrow morning.

At this meeting also will be Dane A. Pearson, the man who did the actual buying of the stock for the out-of-town interests. Although he had been quietly buying up shares for a year or more, little attention was paid to Pearson until he acquired a huge block of stock from the Leiter estate.

He bought this stock after a local court had given permission for the sale, and paid $125 a share for it. This was a record price.

President's Stock Obtained.

The men Pearson represented, however, did not gain actual control of the company until about a month ago, when Ord Preston, the president, sold out his holdings at $125 a share. In doing this, Preston made Pearson agree to pay a similar price to minority stockholders who might want to sell.

Altogether there are 130,000 shares of stock in the Washington Gas Light Co., and today the Boston-New York group owns fully two-thirds of this number.

After the last transaction, the Public Utilities Commission took up the question of whether or not the new stockholders had violated the La Follette

Mrs. Bainbridge Colby Seeks Divorce in Reno

MRS. BAINBRIDGE COLBY.

Reno, Nev., July 10 (A.P.).—Efforts to obtain a divorce in Paris having failed, Mrs. Nathalie Sedgwick Colby has come to Reno to file divorce papers against Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State in the Cabinet of Woodrow Wilson. The Colby decree was denied by the Paris courts in March, 1928, at which time there was considerable stir over the granting of divorces to Americans.

Mrs. Colby arrived in Reno a week ago, and she and her daughter, Mrs. Robert Cameron Rogers, have taken a bungalow at the edge of the city's business district.

Mrs. Colby was ill today but her daughter readily admitted her mother was here for a period of three months, and said she expected a divorce action would follow the three-month residence period. Mrs. Colby's counsel would not discuss the case.

There are two other children, Mrs. Frederick Delafield, jr., and Miss Nathalie Sedgwick Colby.

Before he entered the Cabinet of Woodrow Wilson Mr. Colby took an active part in the Progressive party, having previously been a Republican. He was a member of the United States Shipping Board and of the board of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, and after the retirement of Wilson, he and Colby were associated in law practice together. The Colbys were married in 1895.

HOOVER IS UNMOVED BY TARIFF PROTESTS

Notes From Governments Fail to Draw United States Into Discussion.

DRIVE IS CALLED FAILURE

By ALBERT W. FOX.

President Hoover has effectively checked all efforts of foreign nations to embroil the United States Government in tariff discussions growing out of the prospective rates in the Hawley-Smoot bill. The protests, numbering 38 to date, have had no noticeable effect on the executive branch of the Government, and European threats of a tariff war are apparently stiffening the administration's determination to view tariff legislation as a matter of distinctly American concern.

Secretary of State Stimson has taken no official notice of any of the foreign protests beyond transmitting the communications to Senator Smoot, chairman of the Senate finance committee. Curiously enough, some of the foreign statesmen expected replies to their protests from the American State Department and anticipated diplomatic conversations relative to the tariff rates against which they are protesting. There appears to have been a belief in European capitals that threats coupled with protests would bring the United States to the point of making the prospective American tariff rates a subject of international discussion.

But developments during the past 48 hours are causing these statesmen to view the matter in a somewhat different light. The united front which European nations were to present at the Amsterdam meeting of the International Chamber of Commerce has not frightened Washington. After one speech in reference to the American tariff the international gathering has decided to keep the American tariff out of further official discussions. The campaign to lay the groundwork for

OLD ORCHARD FLIERS LAND SHIP AT ROME

RETURN FLIGHT BANNED

Littorio Airport, Rome, July 10 (A.P.).—Gliding out of the darkening western sky, Capt. Lewis A. Yancey and Roger Q. Williams brought their plane, the Pathfinder, to a landing on this field at 9:30 o'clock [illegible]ight, thus fulfilling their aim of a flight from Old Orchard, Me., to Rome.

The last lap of their flight was from Santander, Spain, and was more difficult than any portion of their hop across the Atlantic because they encountered cyclonic headwinds that sometimes reduced their speed to between 25 and 30 miles an hour.

The American aviators accomplished another feat that never had been done by any of their compatriots. They kept Benito Mussolini waiting for two hours and at length disappointed him completely. For the head of the Italian government had to leave the field just ten minutes before the Pathfinder came in sight.

But if Mussolini was not there to congratulate them there were plenty of others, headed by Italo-Balbo, undersecretary for aviation, and representatives of the American Embassy. Several thousand ordinary citizens stood in mass formation for many hours, and when the fliers finally clambered from their machine, the crowd hoisted them and Commander Francisco de Pinedo, an Italian air hero, upon their shoulders and paraded the trio to waiting automobiles. The shouts that accompanied this demonstration were typically Latin in pitch and volume.

Undersecretary Balbo and Gen. De Pinedo managed to shake themselves free from the crowd long enough to congratulate Yancey and Williams. Alexander Kirk, first secretary of the

QUEEN MARIE CALLED AS PLOT IS REVEALED

Prince Carol Named in Averted Coup as Conspirators Are Rounded Up.

MANUE WINS ON REFORMS

Bucharest, Roumania, July 10 (A.P.). Despite the discovery that the exiled Prince Carol was involved in a plot by military conspirators against the present regime and the continuance of arrests for complicity in that plot, official Roumania today went unruffled on its way.

Absolute quiet reigned in the capital and the only indication of apprehension was the fact that Premier Juliu Maniu sent a messenger to Bled, Jugoslavia, requesting Queen Marie to shorten her visit with her daughter, the Queen of Jugoslavia, who recently became the mother of a son.

M. Maniu scored a personal triumph over the political opposition in the Chamber of Deputies this afternoon when that body voted to receive the administration reform bill. The opposition now is expected to carry out a threat of quitting the chamber when the bill comes up for debate. In that case, efforts of the regency to harmonize the government and the opposition will be registered as a failure.

Vintila Bratianu, former premier, told the Associated Press tonight that the Liberal party bloc was not in any way involved in the plot to overthrow the government despite the part which J. G. Duca, former foreign minister, was reported to have had in it.

"The Liberal party," said M. Bratianu, "is the enemy of a dictatorship of any kind, whether it is Carlist or Fascist. We absolutely reject the idea of military interference in politics and we will support any punitive measures which the government may decide to take against the offenders."

MAPP CHALLENGES POLLARD TO DEBATE

SEEKS CLARITY, IS CLAIM

Special to The Washington Post.

Richmond, Va., July 10.—Senator G. Walter Mapp today sent a formal invitation to Dr. John Garland Pollard to debate with him on the question of centralization in Virginia. Senator Mapp left the matters of detail to his opponent, but suggested the desirability of holding the discussion in Richmond.

He asserted that such a discussion within the Democratic party will clarify the political situation and enlighten voters upon the relative positions which they occupy in the pending campaign.

Senator Mapp's letter, in part, follows:

"The daily press of Newport News of June 23, 1929, reporting that part of your speech of the 22d at said place, dealing with the centralization of government, quoted you as stating 'that the governor is less powerful' in Virginia than before the reorganization of our State government, and in the same speech you are quoted as giving a number of reasons why the government is now closer to the people than heretofore."

"This statement was so at variance with the claims of the advocates and proponents of the new constitution and short ballot amendments, and likewise so contrary to my own understanding of the situation, that in my speech in Richmond on the evening of June 27 I expressed my willingness to join with you in a friendly public discussion of the question of the centralization of our government. This invitation was renewed in several other speeches and in Associated Press statement following your speech at Wise, Va., on July 3, in which speech, in referring to the ap-

Women Wets' Organization Will Have Capital Branch

A Washington branch of the new antiprohibition organization composed of women is now being formed, Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, of New York, the president, has informed The Post. Until the local branch is ready to function, however, Mrs. Sabin will not make public the names of the women who are members.

The Woman's Organiaztion for National Prohibition Reform, as the women wets call their organization, was formed by Mrs. Sabin after she had resigned as a member of the Women's National Republican Club because of President Hoover's bone dry policy.

Among other things, the local branch will be expected to make a survey to determine whther there are as many speakeasies in the National Capital as there once were licensed saloons. This survey was ordered as a result of the Girl Who Was Awarded $25,000 for Breach of Promise by Millionaire Oil Burner Maker Files New Action Against Him.

Ann Livingston Again Sues Hardinge; Seeks $200,000

Chicago, July 10 (A.P.).—Four days after she was awarded $25,000 by a jury for breach of promise, Miss Ann Livingston today filed another suit against Franklin Hardinge, millionaire oil burner manufacturer, this time for $200,000.

Miss Livingston originally sued Hardinge for $250,000 in the breach of promise litigation, and arguments for a new trial are pending.

Benjamin Ehrlich, Miss Livingston's attorney in the first suit, filed only the praecipe today in the second action and could not be reached for a statement concerning the basis of the new suit.

Neither Hardinge nor his attorney, John Bussian, would hazard a guess as to the basis of the action.

Associates of Ehrlich later said the basis of the suit would not be revealed at this time.

Miss Livingston's first suit was based upon Hardinge's failure to marry her after she had come to Chicago from Tulsa, Okla.

The trial was enlivened by bits of sensational testimony and charges of perjury were hurled at Hardinge's witnesses by counsel for Miss Livingston.

Miss Livingston painted a picture of an ardent wooing and finally a proposal of marriage from Hardinge. The wealthy manufacturer, however, told a different story. He maintained that he had merely befriended the woman, and asked her to marry him on the condition that she would sign a prenuptial agreement limiting her claim on his estate to $100,000 in lieu of her dower rights.

The prenuptial agreement, however, was never signed.

Following the verdict Hardinge's counsel asked a hearing on a plea for a new trial, and the motion will be argued here Saturday.

Investigation Is Asked.

When Pearson refused to reveal the identity of the men he represented, Corporation Counsel W. W. Bride called on the Department of Justice to make an investigation and determine who the new stockholders were.

The Department of Justice was about to start such an investigation when Pearson notified Bride that the information that was wanted would soon be forthcoming. Then followed the aforementioned meeting of the new gas company bosses in New York.

Realty Men Named In Contempt Case

Suppressed $6,000 Offer to Force Property Sale for Less, Is Charge.

On complaints that they obstructed justice while acting as real estate agents, contempt of court citations were issued yesterday by Chief Justice Walter I. McCoy in District Supreme Court for John B. Showalter, trading as the Showalter Realty Co., Alexander O. Campbell and Luther A. Bennett, salesmen of the company. They have until July 18 to show cause why they should not be adjudged in contempt.

Assistant District Attorney Neil Burkinshaw filed the complaint, alleging that the trio, while serving as real estate agents for Sarah Bennett, executrix of the estate of John H. Burke, suppressed an offer of $6,000 for property at 1128 G street northeast. Burkinshaw's petition declares they obtained a sale by the court at $3,400 to Campbell and that Campbell then accepted the $6,000 offer.

The petition points out that the contract for the $6,000 sale was made January 30, several weeks before the court authorized the $3,400 sale. The transaction was disclosed by Attorney Charles H. Houston, guardian of the minor children in the estate, to Justice Jennings Bailey in probate division of the court and United States Attorney Leo A. Rover was ordered to conduct an investigation.

The aircraft display will be similar to the show held annually in Chicago. An especial appeal to the novice who has ambitions to fly will be made, according to Ried.

GENERAL WALKOUT NEW ORLEANS PERIL

Conciliators Strive to Devise Compromise to Settle Trolley Strike.

CRISIS MAY COME TODAY

New Orleans, July 10 (A.P.).—The street car strike smoldered today while negotiators were struggling for a compromise to ward off threats of a general labor walkout.

Decisive action was promised for tomorrow by all sides. The Government and civic conciliators expect to get down to business tomorrow around the conference tables; the New Orleans Public Service plans to attempt to start street cars, and labor leaders were preparing for an open-air mass meeting to decide on the proposed sympathetic strike.

Gov. Huey P. Long, who has championed labor during his political life and Mayor Arthur O'Keefe of New Orleans have been invited to address the open-air labor meeting tomorrow night. The governor may break his silence on his attitude on the strike. Other speeches will be made by labor leaders, who believe that organized labor stands overwhelmingly in the support of the striking conductors and motormen.

Violence Danger Seen.

Union leaders have been successful in dissuading the strikers from acts of violence against the company, and except for arrests for lesser offenses there has been no violation of the Federal injunction against the strikers. The leaders doubt if they would be able to hold down the men and their sympathizers if another attempt is made to operate street cars tomorrow under guard of United States marshals and police. The city commission council has advised against it. The marshal has sworn in more than 300 deputies, and one woman, Miss Tinette Lichtenstein, offered her services.

Representatives of both the company and the union expressed willingness to meet the conciliators separately tomorrow, but neither side has advanced any concrete plan for settlement since the original proposals were rejected.

Says Troops Could Be Used.

Speaking on "Government by Injunction" before the Young Men's Business Club, Judge Rufus E. Foster of the United States Circuit Court declared that the Army or the Navy, or both, could be called to protect the street car company's property if deputy marshals failed.

"These unions have no right to try to prevent employers from hiring other people," said Judge Foster. "Neither have they the right to prevent others from working if they so desire. The property of others will be protected by the court. If the marshals can not do it, the court can call on either the Army or the Navy, or both, to see that the court order is carried out."

Convict Is Killed Working on Road

Andrew Page, 30, Crushed Under Truck; Driver Is Held.

Andrew Page, colored, 30 years old, a prisoner at the Maryland House of Correction, was almost instantly killed yesterday morning when he was run over by a sand and gravel truck on the Baltimore boulevard, near Waterloo, Md. The truck was driven by Emory Watson, of Glen Burnie, Md.

Page had been leased to W. E. Allen, contractor, who has the contract for the building of shoulders on the Baltimore boulevard. He was working as a laborer. The truck is owned by Elmer Starling, the contractor who is furnishing sand and gravel for the construction, and by whom Watson is employed.

Watson told State Policeman D. N. McCarthy that he swerved the truck to avoid striking Page, but that the dual wheels on the back protruded from the side further than he had gauged. The negro was thrown beneath the truck and his head and body crushed. Watson was held on $500 bond by Justice of the Peace Howard U. Gosnell, of Savage, Md. Authorities are undecided on whether to hold an inquest.

SLAIN MAN'S WIFE FREED AFTER QUIZ

Police Seek Antagonist of Mudd in Battle After Wild Party.

TWO ARE STILL IN JAIL

Another prisoner held in connection with the slaying early last Sunday of William Francis Mudd, found dead in his home at 1101 W street southeast after a wild party at the home of Grover Good in Arlington, was released from the Arlington County Jail yesterday by Commonwealth's Attorney William C. Gloth.

Ruling that evidence was insufficient to warrant holding her longer, Gloth ordered that Mrs. Marion Mudd, widow of the dead man, be given her freedom. This leaves two still in jail in connection with the affair; George W. Crawford, of Mulhall, Va., and Paul W. Cable, of Bolling Field, are to appear in police court at Arlington today before Judge Harry R. Thomas for further examination.

Police are still searching for a man known as "Jimmy," with whom, according to information given Gloth by an anonymous woman who telephoned him on Tuesday, Mudd is alleged to have engaged in a strenuous battle near the R. F. & P. railroad tracks after leaving Good's home in a truck to return to Washington.

To the end Mrs. Mudd reiterated her original story, that although Mudd was extremely intoxicated when, in company of Cable, he left Good's party in a truck operated by Crawford, he was uninjured at the time and climbed into the truck unaided, indicating that he must have received his injuries at some other point later.

MAPP SEEKS DEBATE WITH J. G. POLLARD

pointive power of the Governor, you are quoted as having said, 'It has been weakened rather than strengthened,' instancing the appointment of the members of the State Corporation Commission, and alleging that the Governor now 'has 51 less appointments than formerly.'

"You were likewise quoted by the press as being desirous of a joint discussion, but were awaiting a direct personal invitation from me.

"I am, therefore, writing to invite you to a friendly joint discussion of the question of centralization of our government in Virginia as it now exists, such as we had at Cape Charles during the campaign to adopt the new constitution and short ballot amendments, said debate to be held in Richmond during the week beginning July 15, if agreeable to you.

Clarification Is Forecast.

"Such a discussion, it seems to me, will, without embarrassment to the Democratic party, clarify the whole situation; and will give an enlightened electorate the detailed information on which to base an intelligent conclusion."

Senator Mapp today issued a statement making clear his position with respect to the maintenance of adequate funds for the construction of highways.

He declares that at no time has he advocated a reduction of the gasoline tax, but that he is in favor of a lowering the automobile tax, which he believes to be excessive. The added revenue from whole year licenses, together with the increased gas consumption by reason of such use, he believes, would produce as great a revenue as is now paid.

Lightning Hits Church, But Firemen Save It

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 10.—Lightning struck the steeple of the John Wesley (negro) Methodist Church here late yesterday during a heavy thunderstorm, causing a slight blaze in the belfry of the edifice. Firemen extinguished the blaze before any considerable damage was done.

Fire Chief John F. Noll attributed the lack of damage to the fact that the fire alarm was sounded less than 5 minutes after the bolt struck, enabling the firemen to reach the scene before the flames in the wooden steeple gained much headway.

Another bolt struck the barn of Mrs. Katie Hooks at Port Republic, 16 miles east of here, the blaze which followed destroying the frame structure. The loss was light.

Sculptor Favors New Statue Hall

Ruckstall States His Views at Wade Hampton Unveiling.

Erection of a magnificent new building to house statues of all National and State heroes and notables was urged yesterday by F. W. Ruckstall, New York sculptor, whose statue of Gen. Wade Hampton, of South Carolina, was unveiled in Statuary Hall at the Capitol. The present hall, according to Ruckstall, is entirely inadequate for the number of statues in it and for those proposed for it.

Representative George Holden Tinkham, of Boston, has prepared a bill providing for the erection of a Hall of Fame which will be introduced in December. Ruckstall believes that the Hall of Fame should be second only to the Capitol in grandeur with a fixed space for each State to display statues of its heroes and favored sons.

Mr. Ruckstall, who has been staying at the Grace Dodge Hotel, will leave for New York today. When editor of the Art World Magazine he published a design prepared by Charles E. Fairman, curator of the Capitol, which he believes will solve the problem of crowded conditions in the present Statuary Hall.

STARTLED BY POLICE, BOY DIES OF FRIGHT

FOUND IN ICE CREAM BIN

Overcome by fright when found in the salt bin of an ice cream plant where, with another boy, he had sought shelter from the heat, Clary Angel Tucker, 13 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Tucker, of 946 New York avenue northwest, died at Memorial Hospital, Richmond, Va., early yesterday morning.

Young Tucker, who had been visiting his aunt, Mrs. Mary Frazier, in Richmond, while his parents were locating in Washington, took a stroll Tuesday night with a playmate. They settled comfortably in the salt bin of the ice cream plant and fell asleep. One of the boys stirred, and a watchman called police.

Policemen Cook and Kidds responded, found the lads asleep and, waking them, began to question the pair. When one of the policemen said, "I guess I'd better take you to the station house," Tucker collapsed. He was rushed to the hospital, but was declared dead upon arrival.

Mrs. Tucker received news of the serious illness of her son early yesterday morning and left at once for Richmond, but too late to see the boy alive. The father is an engineer at the Woodward & Lothrop store in this city. Mr. and Mrs. Tucker had been in Washington only six weeks, and had planned to send for Clary when they had become settled here.

New Drive for Y. M. C. A. At Petersburg to Start

Special to The Washington Post.

Petersburg, Va., July 10.—The drive in Petersburg by committees from the Young Men's Christian Association to raise $5,000, with which to purchase a new boiler and other equipment for a heating plant for the association building having failed, the board of directors and finance committee of the association held a special meeting today to ascertain what steps should be taken to avoid closing the association building during next winter.

The directors and finance committee pledged themselves to go to work at once to raise the necessary $5,000, about $1,000 of which has already been pledged.

Abandonment of Auto Starts Search for Boys

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., July 10.—State motor vehicle and county officers were investigating today circumstances of the finding of an automobile bearing a Maryland license by Avalon Orndorff, of the Winchester postoffice, near his home in the county. He reported the car as being apparently abandoned, and it was learned that two boys had been attempting to sell the machine for $10. The boys could not be found when officers went to Albin, where the car was abandoned.

$160,000 SECURITY THEFT IS REVEALED

Young Woman Held in Cleveland After Alleged Sale of $13,000 in Bonds.

INNOCENT, SHE ASSERTS

Newark, N. J., July 10 (A.P.).—The theft of bonds and securities valued at $160,000 from the offices of the law firm of Pitney, Hardin & Skinner on June 26 was announced today with the receipt of a report from police of Cleveland, Ohio, that a young woman there was arrested after selling $13,000 worth of the securities.

The Cleveland report said the prisoner was Miss Grace Brooks, of 1556 Hazel road northwest, that city.

John R. Hardin, a member of the law firm and president of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., was puzzled by word that she had disposed of $13,000 worth of securities. He said the thief obtained only two $1,000 bonds which were negotiable. The rest was in registered securities which had been canceled.

Partner Discovers Loss.

He and local police both declined to disclose details of the robbery. From other sources it was learned that William L. Morgan, of the law firm, discovered the bonds and securities were missing from a safe on his return from lunch June 26.

Hardin said he had been informed by the brokerage firm of Samuel Underleider & Co., of New York City, that the two bonds had turned up in their Cleveland office. They were bonds issued by the Erie Railroad for its subsidiary, the New York, Susquehanna & Western.

Mr. Hardin said he learned Miss Brooks was arrested when she returned to a bank today to dispose of additional securities worth $24,000.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 10 (A.P.).—Investigating the sale of $13,000 worth of stolen securities, part of the loot of a $160,000 robbery at Newark, N. J., police tonight held for questioning a woman who gave the name of Grace Brooks, of Cleveland.

Did Not Know of Theft, Claim.

They said she admitted selling the securities, but had not known they were stolen and that they had been given to her for sale on commission by a man whose identity the police did not reveal.

The sale of the securities was handled through Samuel Ungerleider & Co., a brokerage firm. Miss Brooks was a regular customer of the company. When the brokers learned the securities were stolen they informed Miss Brooks. She at that time had other securities given her by the man who police tonight sought, and she returned them to him, she said.

When, through the brokers and an insurance firm, the sale of the stolen securities was reported to the police, they found Miss Brooks at her apartment here and took her to police headquarters for questioning, but did not place a charge against her.

Alum, Salt and Onion Caled Snake Poison Cure

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 10.—Alum, salt and onions are prescribed as an antidote for the deadly poison of a rattlesnake by I. Ferd Cave, veteran Page County berry picker and snake hunter residing in the Blue Ridge Mountains. Cave never goes out into the mountains without his supply of alum, salt and onions, which he asserts were recommended to him by a Kentuckian who twice was bitten by rattlesnakes without harm.

Cave says that the alum is to be chewed and placed on the bite while wet and then the juice of the onion squeezed on and the salt added. Cave says that he believes this mixture counteracts the deadly poison if it is applied immediately.

Judge Comforts Girl In Alleged Voodoo Plot

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., July 10.—That witchcraft, or voodooism still prevails in the minds of some superstitious persons here was disclosed in the hearing of a complaint filed by a colored girl in the Municipal Court. She told Judge McCarron that a colored man cut her hair, placed the hair under a tree, that the hair was causing the tree to die and that she would die when the tree was dead. After hearing the testimony Judge McCarron told the girl that the hair had been removed and that the tree would not die. For this reason, he stated, the girl would continue to live.

TRUST ISSUE FINDS PARTIES HAMPERED

HOOVER POLICY IN DOUBT

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

Although the Democrats as a party probably will not be able to take it up, Gov. Roosevelt's trust-busting address in New York several days ago is apparently holding up the Department of Justice's definition of its trust or big business policy. It may be that the governor's attack will ultimately change it, or at least modify it from the order established by Col. William J. Donovan.

Col. Donovan effected the practice, when he was Assistant Attorney General, of calling in the sponsors of proposed big business mergers and if there was a way in which their merger could be effected legally, of showing them the way, instead of waiting until after the formation of the merger and prosecuting for antitrust violations. As a result some of the greatest consolidations the country has ever known were brought about under the Coolidge administration.

Big business had hoped and had reason to believe that Mr. Hoover's attitude was to be no different from that of his predecessor; that the same helpful assistance in the Department of Justice would obtain. As Secretary of Commerce, it is recalled, he was a prime mover for mass production, standardization and the like, all of which led to the impression that his attitude toward big business generally would be very friendly.

Hoover Policy Undeclared.

It is recalled now, however, in the first shudder of apprehension that the New York governor's attack has caused, that Mr. Hoover vetoed the plan of the oil industry to curtail production and that he also frowned upon the proposed consolidation of the Radio Corporation and the International Telephone & Telegraph Co.

That the old order did not obtain in the Department of Justice was indicated in its treatment of the oil production agreement. It did not call the operators in and tell them that there was a better way, or try to point a legal way to them. Instead it said in effect that the Federal Oil Board had no authority to approve the agreement and that insofar as the operators were concerned it was not for the department to give them a legal opinion. The operators had not expected this. The Government's oil representative had, in fact, been sitting with them for a year or so. The indications are that the administration's final attitude was not a surprise as much as it was a cause of consternation.

It develops definitely now that the Department of Justice has no set attitude on the policy set up by Col. Donovan. It is not prepared to say whether it will go along with his practice or whether it will not. The indications are that, in the light of Governor Roosevelt's attack, it would rather the question not be brought up.

Democratic Forbidden Fruit.

Political observers are inclined to agree that more and more is to be heard of the trust issue, that it may hark back to the trust busting days of 20 or so years ago. There is the thought, too, that in this Democrats would find a warm issue, one that would really kindle the political fires. This being the case, it is understandable that the administration would want to move slowly.

But the Democrats are handicapped in taking advantage of the issue. It does not, in fact, seem that they will be able to do it except as individuals.

It does not seem that the central agency of the party here, the new headquarters that has been set up with Jouett Shouse in charge, and which has throughout the summer been nagging the Republicans as they have never been nagged in vacation time before, will be able to touch it. And this is for the simple reason that it is Gov. Roosevelt's own issue. It has been developing for a long time, but it was he who got it on the front pages in a political light. It will be his issue in his campaign for reelection next year and then presumably his issue for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Should the headquarters here seek to take the matter up it will be aiding Gov. Roosevelt against the other looming party figure, Owen D. Young. If it began doing that it would not last as a party headquarters very long.

Mr. Young is not in a position to pick up the issue, hardly is he able to even subscribe to it. He is closely identified with the Morgans and everything else that is big business.

The local headquarters, the central spokesman for the party, can not take sides between them, or so it would seem.

Hospital Auxiliary Holsd Meeting at Leonardtown

Special to The Washington Post.

Leonardtown, Md., July 10.—A meeting of the Ladies Auxiliary of the St. Mary's Hospital was held this morning and business of great importance was discussed. Plans were made for many improvements and arrangements made for the fourth annual plate supper and bazaar which will be held on July 18 on the lawn surrounding the courthouse at Leonardtown.

Since this is the only hospital in southern Maryland citizens are greatly interested in its welfare. From the time of its establishment, about 12 years ago, many lives have been saved by being able to get immediate treatment.

Man's Life Saved By Senator Bruce

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., July 10.—Former United States Senator William Cabell Bruce, of Maryland, yesterday rescued an 82-year-old commuter from possible death under the wheels of an oncoming railroad train at Ruxton Station, Baltimore County, by jumping into its path and snatching the aged man to safety just as the locomotive passed.

Senator Bruce, who is now 69 years old, was assisted by J. W. Heasian, the acting station agent. The rescued man, H. F. Meyers, of Ruxton, had been sitting in the shade across the tracks from the station and at the approach of the train started to cross to a platform where Senator Bruce and other commuters were waiting.

He apparently misjudged his time, and the engine was rapidly bearing down upon him when Senator Bruce and Hessian saw his peril at the same time and jumped to the tracks. Meyers seemed none the worse for his experience, and with Senator Bruce boarded the train for the city.

PAPER FIRM QUITS NEWSPAPER OWNING

International Will Retain the Newsprint Contract, However.

TRADE VOLUME ASSURED

New York, July 10 (A.P.).—The Associated Press learned on high authority today that negotiations are now under way for the gradual disposal of all of the newspaper investments of the International Paper Co. The company, however, will retain its contracts for newsprint.

While no official statement was forthcoming from the company, its attitude was said to be that since its objectives of stabilizing prices and building up future volume through long-term contracts had been attained, the need for newspaper investments no longer exists.

When made, these investments were the backbone of an aggressive newsprint sales campaign, the International Paper Co. lending financial assistance to publishers in consideration of long-term agreements to purchase newsprint from the company. This program, the company contended, minimized the danger of violent price fluctuations.

The paper company is now running its low-cost Canadian mills at full capacity, it was said, and, by curtailing production in its higher-cost American mills, is contributing to stabilization of conditions throughout the industry by substantial purchases of news print from the Quebec and Ontario mills of other companies. This, it was said, will enable the company to run at a higher rate than would otherwise have been possible.

On the basis of testimony before the Federal Trade Commission by A. R. Graustein, president of the International Paper Co., the company, in addition to strengthening its news print sales position by long-term contracts, expects to realize a profit from its investments. Mr. Graustein stated at that time that on the Boston Herald financing, the International had a potential profit of at least $1,000,000.

Early in May the International company disposed of its interest in the Brooklyn Eagle and other papers of the Frank E. Gannett newspaper chain.

Mr. Gannett, in announcing that he had retired all of the International's investments in his papers, said that more than $2,700,000 was involved.

This sum was included in the $10,000,000 which Mr. Graustein told the Federal Trade Commission his firm had invested in newspapers over the country.

The Listening Post

By CARLISLE BARGERON

IF THERE is one thing that is definite in this world, about which there can not be any question whatsoever, it is that Dr. Hiram W. Evans does not intend to return to the practice of dentistry. Come what may, adversity or prosperity, rain or sunshine, this gentleman has forever turned his back on the filling of cavities.

One might have thought that with all the setbacks the Ku Klux Klan has received in the past few years, the difficulty that it has had in making the grade, the genial imperial wizard would have now and then turned his thoughts backward to the peaceful pursuits of yesteryear, to the rhythmic buzz of the dentist's drill, that soft sizzling purr that is broken only by the patient's yelps.

Most men who come to the big cities and make good often pine for the old native heath, and especially in time of adversity, when the world looks dark all around, they are wont to sing, "Way Down Upon the Suwanee River," "My Old Kentucky Home," and in the case of the doctor's State, "I've been working on the railroad all the livelong day."

• • • •

BUT the doctor is apparently not constituted as other men. The fact that Mr. Hoover did not place the klan at his right hand for services rendered in the campaign, that one of his first administrative acts instead was to sit hard on the klan's pet, the establishment of a Department of Education—these slaps mean nothing to the doctor. Neither is the steady dropping off in paid-up followers wholly discouraging to him. These setbacks press the doctor for new ideas, but then he is the man who can conceive them. It will be when he is unable to do this that he may conclude that the business of dentistry is not so bad after all.

But that time is far off. The doctor has just hit upon an idea that should carry him for long. He is out to repeal the fifteenth amendment. That is what carries him back South. In the warm clime of that land at this season of the year there is, the doctor believes, fertile soil for him.

• • • •

THE doctor would have us believe that there is a more serious purpose in his return to where the birth of the Nation occurred. He told newspaper men who saw him out in Maryland the other night, or rather intimated to them, that if they were right smart they could find something significant in his return. There was something about the building of a new Democratic party—a Southern one.

That thought has been floating around for some time. The doctor apparently hasn't gotten a definite grasp on it yet because the outline of his plans the other night was rather vague.

The doctor has frequently said apropos of the headquarters of his organization that the headquarters were where he happened to be, that he, in fact, was the headquarters.

Which being the case, the headquarters one day in late June of 1928 were on the revolving stool before a pie counter in Houston, Tex. It was there that we ran into the doctor—during the Houston convention. We were anxious to know just what the klan intended to do about Smith's nomination, at the time considered inevitable.

"We are not interested in personalities," said the imperial wizard, turning on his temporary throne, "but there is a great principle here and the principle is——" but just about that time a piece of pie was offered up to the klan head and his remaining words were lost in a mouthful whack of it.

AUSTRALIAN FLIERS WIN PRAISE OF KING

Southern Cross Makes 12,000-Mile Trip to England in 12 Days 21 Hours.

WOMEN JOIN IN WELCOME

London, July 10 (A.P.).—King George tonight sent congratulations to two Australian and two American airmen, led by Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith, who this afternoon landed the plane Southern Cross at Croyden Airfield after a record-breaking 12,000-mile journey from Australia.

The elapsed time of the trip from the Australian coast to the English coast was 12 days 21 hours and 18 minutes; 45 minutes more were required for the machine to reach Croyden. The best previous mark for the journey was 15 days 1 hour and 7 minutes from the Australian coast to Croyden, established by Bert Hinkler in February, 1928.

King George sent this message to Lord Thomson, secretary of state for air:

"Please convey to the four airmen of the Southern Cross my heartfelt congratulations for their remarkably successful achievement despite all the dangers and hardships that they experienced."

There was a wild scene of welcome when the plane touched ground at Croyden. Women raced with men across the airdrome to meet the fliers and cheer them to the echo.

"We had a lot of minor troubles," said Capt. Kingsford-Smith, "but it was a good trip, taken all around. Between Rangoon and Bagdad the heat was terrific, forcing us to cut down the number of revolutions at which our motor was running. Because of this we were unable to carry as much petrol as we would have liked."

40 HURT WHEN FAST TRAIN LEAVES RAILS

FIVE CARS GO INTO DITCH

Rocky Mount, N. C., July 10 (A.P.).—Forty or more persons were injured, fourteen of them seriously enough to require hospital treatment, by the derailment of five cars on the fast Florida-New York passenger train No. 84 of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad near Enfield, N. C., today.

One woman was so badly hurt that she may die, while several others were suffering from broken bones. A list of the more seriously injured, given out late today by officials of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Hospital here, showed eleven women and three men in the hospital. Railroad officials said that they had been unable to check up on all of those injured and given first aid treatment before a relief train reached the scene.

Capital Resident Hurt.

The injured included Miss Sallie Cowell, of Washington.

The wreck occurred in what is known as Ruggles Swamp, 1½ miles north of Enfield. A truck under the dining car broke, W. B. Darrow, superintendent of transportation for the Rocky Mount division, said, causing the rear end of the diner to leave the rails. Five Pullman cars were dragged over the ties for 75 yards and then overturned into the swamp, sliding down a 6-foot embankment.

Communication Lines Down.

When the cars overturned all telegraph and telephone lines maintained by the railroad company along its lines were broken. As a result railroad offices were unable to get any early information and for several hours little was known as to the number of injured.

None of the train crew was injured. Assisted by the passengers from the portion of the train that remained on the rails, they broke windows in the overturned cars and helped remove the injured occupants. Most of the injured went at once to Enfield and by the time the relief train from Rocky Mount arrived on the scene had received medical treatment. Many were taken into homes of Enfield residents and after binding up their cuts and bruises continued their journey. The railroad company announced tonight that it was making a house-to-house canvass of Enfield in an effort to locate all injured persons.

Swedish Aviators Hop From Iceland

Next Stop to Be Greenland; Were Delayed Month by Engine Trouble.

Reykjavik, Iceland, July 10 (A.P.).—Exactly a month after they left Stockholm on a flight to America, Capt. Albin Ahrenberg, Swedish flier, and his companions left here this afternoon for Ivigtut, Greenland. The aviators had been here for weeks trying to get their flying boat Sverige into condition for the next lap. After several attempts, all of which were halted by motor trouble, they sent to the Junkers works in Germany for a new engine. This was installed and found satisfactory. The new start was made at 1:45 p. m. today.

The fliers were in nowise downhearted by the delays. They took off with enthusiasm and with high hope that if the hop to Ivigtut was accomplished they would be able to continue to New York. They intended to take on a new supply of fuel in Greenland.

Former Teacher Forged Notes; To Serve 4 Years

St. Louis, July 10 (A.P.).—Mrs. Verna Owen, 35, former St. Louis school teacher, who abandoned that profession to enter the brokerage business here and then failed, pleaded guilty today to four charges of forging names of other teachers and friends to notes and was sentenced to four years in prison.

Circuit Attorney Franklin Miller estimated that the losses through Mrs. Owen's operations would aggregate $100,000, but she insisted this figure was "greatly exaggerated." Mrs. Owen fled when she was indicted last April, but surrendered yesterday. She declared she would work to repay every cent that was lost.

CHINA ARRESTS REDS OPERATING RAILWAY

BREAK WITH SOVIET SEEN

Tokyo, July 10 (A.P.).—An agency dispatch from Harbin today said that Chinese authorities on Wednesday arrested 174 Soviet officials and employes of the Chinese Eastern Railway. The happening was described as a coup aimed at ousting Russia from joint control of the line.

The dispatch came from the Harbin correspondent of Nippon Shimbun Rengo, the Japanese agency, which is modeled after the Associated Press organization. It stated that 37 of the prisoners already had been started under guard for the Siberian border and would be deported.

The arrests were said to include the Russian vice director of railways and the director of the trading commission. All Russian banking and trading organizations in Harbin have been closed.

The dispatch added that the coup was considered as having made a virtually unhealable rupture between China and the Soviet. It began Wednesday morning at 7 o'clock when Chinese police seized the telephone and telegraph systems of the Chinese Eastern Railway and ordered closed all branches of "Dorcom" (the union of Russian railway employes).

Thereupon the Russians declared a general strike and the Chinese countered with wholesale arrests in Harbin and other stations on the road.

Chinese directors have been appointed to replace the arrested Russians, the Chinese seizing every opening to undermine Russian influence. Managing Director Emshanov and the other highest officials among the Russians still were free, but were threatened with arrest.

Chinese police headquarters in a communique said the May 27 raid on the Russian consulate general in Harbin uncovered evidence that Russian unions and other Soviet agencies in northern Manchuria were concertedly spreading Communist propaganda aimed at disruption of Chinese unity. The announcement said this justified the order by Gen. Chang Ching-Ui, governor of the Harbin district, to close the headquarters of all such Soviet organizations and to disband their personnel.

Harbin, Manchuria, July 10 (A.P.).—Chinese authorities have taken over control of the central telegraph and also the eastern telegraph and telephone lines. It was reported that this movement was part of a Chinese scheme to gain control of the Chinese Eastern Railway from the Russians.

The authorities also closed the Soviet railway committee's headquarters and the offices of the trades commission, the trade unions council and the Naptha syndicate. Several Russian railway officials were arrested and one report said there were twelve of these prisoners.

an international tariff war against America appears to have temporarily collapsed, and the reason for the collapse is the simple fact that the European statesmen themselves saw the folly of attempting to dictate American tariff rates by a policy of coercion and duress.

Nothing would be better calculated to stiffen the American attitude than an international attempt to coerce Mr. Hoover into making concessions or recommending action in line with the protests from Europe. In some instances, the information communicated to the United States from abroad is of such a character as to entitle it to careful consideration, but when this information comes coupled with threats it becomes increasingly difficult to give it a respectful hearing.

Campaign Called Premature.

Diplomats here were inclined yesterday to regard the whole international campaign as having started prematurely and as having damged the European cause. The more the campaign is pressed now, the less chance there will be of getting the European viewpoint fairly before the American Congress in a manner calculated to help the European interests.

It is noted here that Great Britain has not officially protested and has taken no part in the intrigues at Amsterdam. British statesmen, who are far-sighted as usual, have allowed the impulsive statesmen of other nations to indulge in protests and threats. The British government, therefore, again finds itself in the enviable position of keeping aloof and letting other nations become embroiled in matters which are controversial. If the protests and threats bring results, Great Britain will, of course, gain along with the other nations. If the threats and protests do more harm than good—as appears now likely—the British will have been free from the criticism of having participated in an unfortunate or abortive diplomatic maneuver.

Germany Remains Aloof.

Germany is also keeping out of the international campaign against America. There are German interests which will be affected by the American tariff rates, but the German statesmen realize that nothing is to be gained by attempting to coerce the Congress of the United States in the matter of tariff legislation.

Despite reports to the contrary, Canada has remained out of the fight so far as any official action of the Canadian government is concerned. The Canadian officials realize that the United States knows where Canada stands and by what duties Canadian interests would be adversely affected. There may be retaliation later if the American rates adversely affect Canada, but the Canadian government is fully aware of the fact that it would be worse than useless to indulge in threats while the American tariff bill is in the process of formation.

Senator Smoot, chairman of the Senate finance committee, does not regard the protests as unusual under the circumstances. The coming legislative battle in which the Democrats and Republican insurgents will fight for lower rates will be influenced to some extent by the foreign protests but it is uncertain whether this European activity will be a help or a hindrance to the opponents of the Smoot-Hawley bill. If the campaign is based on protests and threats by foreign nations, it will be a decided hindrance to efforts to lower the rates, according to the general view here.

There is no tendency thus far to make the tariff an international rather than an American issue.

nated against they have, of course, the right to protest and to secure a determination of the questions at issue by our courts."

Four notes presented by the Belgian Ambassador declared the House bill had occasioned the "greatest concern" in Belgium, particularly as it affected glass, leather, chemical products, cement, asbestos, rabbit skins, floor coverings, photographic products, wire netting and bone glue.

The French Embassy transmitted "lively protests" on behalf of French exporters and manufacturers and appended remarks that the situation "by which the minimum French tariff had been granted to almost all American merchandise, without the slightest corresponding advantage having been obtained for French trade, gives a serious character to these complaints which seem to merit the attention of the two governments."

Items Listed by France.

The French documents found objection to the proposed rates on laces, velvets, embroideries, silks, rugs, hides, gloves, walnuts, cherries, agate buttons, briar pipes, plate glass, pharmaceutical preparations, flower bulbs and plants, seeds and tapestries.

The Austrian government declared the trade balance with the United States was largely in favor of the latter and added that "this state of affairs is now seriously menaced by the tariff bill."

Some provisions, if enacted, Austria said, would wipe out a large portion of its trade with this countrty. Rates on hides, smokers' articles, hats and wire were objected to.

vorable balance" in trade relations.

"Italy has always accepted an unfavorable balance in trade relations with this country," the Italian Ambassador wrote, remarking also that the restricted immigration policy in force had substantially the volume and character of the Italo-American trade.

Cherries, nuts, canned tomatoes, hemp, edible olive oil, artificial silk, hats and tartaric acid were articles which the Italians thought should be given wore tariffs than the bill proposed.

British Colonies Object.

British colonial protests figured largely in the memoranda, Australia listing wool, hides, metals and machinery, meats, drugs and chemicals and lumber as articles which were shipped in large quantities to the United States and which would be affected by the bill.

The Governor of the Bahamas also looked with "grave concern" on the proposed increases on tomatoes and sponges, declaring the Bahaman varieties in no way competed with those produced in Florida.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, joined in the attack on the tariff bill late yesterday. Calling attention to what he said was a report that an amendment to the bill was planned to provide for an embargo against nations adopting retaliatory measures against this country, the senator declared "a more impractical, inopportune and undiplomatic suggestion could scarcely be made."

"If such a suggestion finds any administrative or congressional support whatever," he added, "it will be time for those interests and sections depending upon foreign markets for sale of their products to bestir themselves or prepare for an economic and trade war as violent and destructive of property as a clash of arms and armaments."

Tariff League in Action.

The American Tariff League announced that in response to a reported threat on the part of certain foreign countries to use the International Chamber of Commerce, now in session in Amsterdam, as an agency through which to attack the American tariff, it had taken steps to combat this move.

Expressing a belief that most of the foreign opposition is based upon misinformation, the league officials sent to Julius H. Barnes, an American representative at Amsterdam, information with which to oppose possible action by the chamber.

It was said today by Chairman Reed, of the Senate subcommittee holding hearings on metals, that R. J. Roberts, export manager of the Ford Motor Co., would appear tomorrow to testify for Henry Ford on the automobile and motor truck tariff.

Representatives of the Packard Motor Co., White Truck Co. and of General Motors also are to appear.

FOUR AVIATORS DIE IN 2 PLANE CRASHES

Former War Flier and Another Killed as New Jersey Ship Loses Wing.

TWO DEAD IN HONOLULU

Hackensack, N. J., July 10 (A.P.).—Maj. William Strong, of Arizona, former war-time aviator, and Leo Croeler, of Parmus, N. J., were killed tonight when their airplane fell 1,000 feet at Rochelle Park, near here.

One wing of the plane collapsed and the craft fell like a plummet. Both occupants were dead when taken from the wreckage.

Maj. Strong was the pilot of the plane and Croeler was part owner. Maj. Strong had seen service in the Army during the Pershing expedition into Mexico and in the World War.

Mechanics at the field said the plane, which Croeler purchased less than a week ago, was 12 years old. Croeler was a student flier and had flown in the machine only three or four times. Maj. Strong came from New York to Trautwein Field as an instructor several days ago.

Honolulu, July 10 (A.P.).—Lieut. Clyde A. Kuntz and Private Don F. Moses were killed when their Army bombing plane fell on Ford Island, near this city, and burst into flames last night. The motor failed soon after they took off from Luke Field. Kuntz was born in Montana in October, 1887. Moses was from Alabama.

Jury Waits as Chemist Examines Boy's Viscera

Shelbyville, Tenn., July 10 (A.P.).—A coroner's jury investigating the death last week of 6-year-old Charles Orteur recessed today to await a report from the State laboratories on the condition of the boy's viscera. The viscera was sent to Dr. William Litterer, director of the laboratories, for him to search for traces of poison. The report will not be ready for a week, Litterer said.

The jury was impaneled late last night and heard testimony from the boy's mother and father, John Orteur. The inquest was behind closed doors and officers refused to reveal the testimony. The inquest was ordered by the county attorney general when a life insurance company refused to pay five policies the father had on his son, and recalled that it paid the father for five policies on his 11-year-old daughter last January.

Colored Voters Want Negro on Farm Board

The National Colored Voters Union, the headquarters of which is at 902 Third street northwest, has appealed to President Hoover to appoint a reputable colored farmer as a member of the Federal Farm Board by means of a letter prepared by the executive committee of the union and signed by Aaron P. Prioleau, general director, and William H. Herring, secretary.

"The negroes are the pillar and foundation of the conflicting farm problem," the letter reads, "and the appointment of one of their race will give them recognition and inspire new hopes for the betterment of their condition by remaining on the farm and will induce thousands that left the farm to return."

Navy Men Commended For Rescue of Comrade

Secretary of Navy Adams yesterday sent letters of commendation to John J. Parker and Edwin W. Schelhause, enlisted men, who rescued James W. Walsh, a comrade, who was knocked unconscious when he fell overboard from the U. S. S. Robin at Balboa, Canal Zone, recently.

The two sailors leaped into the water, heedless of being swept by a strong ebb tide under the Robin and another ship moored alongside, and succeeded in passing a rope around Walsh's body. In falling off the ship, Walsh struck his head against the side of the vessel and was rendered unconscious.

Comrade of Noted Mid-West Bandits Claimed by Death

Jim Cummins, Who Rode With James Boys, Younger Gang, and Quantrille's Band, Boasts of Frontier Battles to Very Last.

Higginsville, Mo., July 10 (A.P.).—Jim Cummins, who rode and fought with Jesse James, Cole Younger, William C. Quantrill and still lesser lights of fact and fiction, has battled his last opponent and spun his last yarn.

Death came yesterday to the picturesque gun fighter, who to the last liked to boast of his conquests and whose boastings, at least twice in recent years, were the cause of violence. For the last 27 years Cummins had lived at a Confederate home here, where he died. He was 82 years old.

Jim Cummins admitted he never knew fear. His associates at the old soldiers' home uphold his claims.

He grew to manhood in Clay County, Mo., in company with the James boys, Jesse and Frank. Border warfare between the free staters of Kansas and the proslavery men of Missouri flamed into being. Cummins joined a band of Missouri sympathizers who went down in history as Quantrill's band.

Later he joined the regular Confederate army and served in Clement's regiment, Shelby's brigade.

Peace brought no joy to Jim Cummins. When the James boys organized their gang of notorious train robbers Cummins joined them and participated in their crimes for ten years.

For many years after the train robberies and bank holdups perpetrated in the Middle West by the James boys, Cummins hid in a Montana village under the name of Johnson. He was one of the town's respected citizens despite a reward of $5,000 which for many years had been on his head.

He finally returned to Clay County and surrendered to the sheriff. As no witnesses could be found to be used against him, he was not held for trial. His declining years were spent in story telling.

When he entered the Confederate home, his loquacious ways caused trouble.

In 1907 the annual reunion of the Quantrill band was held in Independence, Mo. David Edwards, 73, another veteran raider, took exception to Cummins' boasting. He drew a revolver and fired, but missed his target and slightly wounded a bystander.

Later in 1909, he quarreled with another veteran, J. R. McCormick, 85, and struck the man a blow that caused his death. No charges were filed as a result of the incident, as McCormick had cursed Cummins.

DRUNKEN MOTORIST GETS YEAR IN JAIL

BUS FARE INCREASE HIT

Judge J. Chew Sheriff, of the Prince Georges County Police Court, yesterday raised the ante in the drive against drunken drivers in the county when he sentenced James Alfred, colored, of Baltimore, to serve a year in jail and to pay a fine of $100 on a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor. The fine was imposed in Hyattsville branch and was in keeping with the announced purpose of the judge to impose stiff sentences in similar cases.

This was the stiffest sentence ever meted out in this class of offences since the establishment of the police court. Alfred was fined an additional $25 for reckless driving and $25 for driving without a permit. William Jones, also colored, a passenger in Alfred's car, was fined $25 on a charge of being drunk and disorderly.

According to Maryland State Policeman E. S. Haddaway, Alfred was driving a car which crashed into one operated by Harry Lawson, of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., and then collided with a second car operated by William Ganges, 1355 Monroe street northwest. Two persons were injured in the accident, which occurred Sunday at Muirkirk, on the Baltimore boulevard. Miss Mary K. Lawson, of South Clifton terrace, suffered a broken leg, and Mrs. Charles Tomlin, of the same address, was cut and bruised on the head.

Robert Lee White, of Dodge Park, Md., who said he was a former Washington policeman, was fined $10 on a charge of reckless driving. He refused to pay the fine and said he would serve it out in jail, declaring that he was not the driver of the car. White was arrested by Constable Andrew Gasch, following a collision on the Marlboro pike, June 23, between a car driven by Fred Meissner, of Washington, and one alleged to have been operated by White.

White said he was not driving the car, but that his brother Frank was driving, but admitted that he jumped from the car and showed his permit and registration card to Meissner. The brother and a younger brother corroborated his statement that he was not driving, and Meissner said that White had shown him his driver's permit. White said that he had been driver of the headquarters car in Washington for a year.

Protest against the alleged raising of the fare on the Washington-Maryland Park line of the Washington, Marlboro & Annapolis Motor Line, Inc., yesterday was forwarded to the Maryland Public Service Commission by several residents of the territory served by the line.

The citizens allege that the line has raised the price of token from 10 for $1 to 8 for $1 without permission by the service commission. The signers of the letter, which was sent to the commission yesterday, were Mrs. Zina Pattison, W. A. Carr, Mrs. E. M. Hall, D. W. Close, Mrs. M. Tatham, Mrs. Huntt, Mrs. Hazel, Mrs Ethel Small, Mrs. Mildred Harris, Miss Alma Harbek and Miss Edna D. Folk.

Mrs. L. L. Altman, vice president of the company, said yesterday that the commission had been communicated with by her husband, who is president. She said that before April 1, tokens were sold at eight for $1 and that the company had received permission to sell tokens at ten for $1 in the District for a two-month trial period and that the Maryland patrons had been given the advantage of the rate. On July 1 the price was merely set back to the proper place, she said.

The signers of the letter which was sent yesterday to the commission declared they had been told by members of the commission that no notice had been given of the change in rates.

Two prominent residents of Mount Rainier, one the mayor of the town and the other a member of the Maryland House of Delegates, will be arraigned before Justice of the Peace Robert E. Joyce tomorrow night. Charges growing out of a dispute over a building permit caused the arrests, police say.

Delegate William S. Keys, police say, had obtained a permit from the Maryland National Park and Planning Commission to make alteration in a building at Rhode Island avenue and Perry street. Town authorities refused to issue a permit, claiming that part of the ground was town property. Keys began work without their permission.

A warrant charging violation of a town ordinance was then sworn out by Mayor John H. Beall. Keys swore out a second warrant charging the mayor with using abusive language and disorderly conduct.

Kanawha Bridge Hearing Recesses

C. & O. to Be Heard July 25 Against Petition of the Virginian Line.

(Associated Press.)

The hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission on the Virginian Railway's application to construct a bridge across the Kanawha River at Deepwater, W. Va., was adjourned late yesterday until July 25.

At that time testimony will be heard from witnesses of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, which is opposing construction of the bridge on the ground that it would be adverse to that road's interests.

Construction of the bridge is proposed to link the Virginian with the Kanawha & Michigan Railroad, operated by the New York Central, and give the Virginian an outlet to the West.

Testimony was heard from Landon C. Bell, of the Ritter Lumber Co., Columbus, Ohio; D. C. Kennedy, of Charleston, W. Va., secretary of the Kanawha Coal Operators Association, and C. H. Jefferies, of Mullens, W. Va., all of whom favored the application because they said it would provide an additional competitive system between Norfolk and the Great Lakes.

The hearing was adjourned to give the Chesapeake & Ohio time to assemble documentary evidence.

ANNAPOLIS MAYOR'S ELECTION AT ISSUE

C. E. Chance, Held Defeated, Asks Recount; Quenstedt Declared Victor.

BALLOTS UNDER GUARD

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., July 10.—Although Charles E. Chance, defeated Democratic candidate for Mayor of Annapolis in Monday's election, today filed petition for a recount of the vote, contending alleged discrepancies will show he was elected. Election supervisors tonight formally certified the election of Walter E. Quenstedt, Republican.

On the face of the returns, Quenstedt received a majority of 23 instead of 21, as originally reported. The total poll was: Quenstedt, 1,029; Chance, 1,006.

The mayor-elect will qualify tomorrow and in turn will swear in the newly elected members of the council, seven of whom are Democrats and two Republicans, next Monday night. As the municipal officials are the final judges of their election under the provisions of an old law, it is planned to appoint a committee of six to conduct the recanvass of the vote.

Mr. Chance's petition is based largely upon the vote from the Fourth Ward, commonly known as the "colored belt," where an unusually small number of ballots was rejected.

Meanwhile all ballot boxes have been locked in the vault of the city treasurer's office, with day and night shifts of watchmen, one representative from each party constantly on duty.

An incident linked with the election aftermath that is causing much talk is the appointment by retiring Mayor Charles W. Smith of Col. Hugh R. Riley as president of the Annapolis Water Co., to serve the unexpired term of Carey L. Meredith, resigned. Riley's tenure will be until next March. In the event Quenstedt is finally declared elected, a Republican would be named for a four-year term. It is pointed out that Riley for years has fought the "organization" Democrats and on the other hand, that he has been a bitter opponent of filtration, for which a fight has been waged for years.

VIRGINIAN TO STUDY EDUCATION BY RADIO

Secretary Wilbur Adds G. B. Zehmer to Committee on Nation-Wide Research.

WILL REPORT JANUARY 1

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., July 10.—Announcement was made today of the appointment of George B. Zehmer, head of the University of Virginia extension division, as a member of a committee composed of the most outstanding educators and broadcasters in the country, designated by the Secretary of the Interior to make a comprehensive study of the use and possibilities of the radio in educational work.

The committee will submit to Secretary Wilbur, by January 1, a report showing the scope of radio instruction so far, a description of actual programs, methods, cost, and outlining plans for recording educational activities which utilize the broadcasting station.

In addition to the study of present conditions, research work in the possibilities of further utilization of the radio will be made by a subcommittee. This committee will measure results already accomplished, study techniques of instruction via the microphone, and will cooperate with authorities now broadcasting educational programs.

Mr. Zehmer said today that a movement in the field of radio, all over the country, toward educational broadcasting was evident. According to announcements from 30 of the best known stations in the East a year ago, they were devoting as much time to educational programs as to jazz music, a fact of some significance.

The University Extension Division, in collaboration with the Virginia Quarterly Review, is putting on book reviews over station WRVA, at Richmond, every Tuesday evening. Numerous congratulatory telegrams from listeners-in have praised this broadcast.

Mr. Zehmer is the author of an article appearing in the 1927-28 number of the Proceedings of the National University Extension Association, which made a preliminary study of the types of programs being broadcast from the leading radio stations in the country.

They will reside at Hagerstown, Md., where the bridegroom is connected with the Kreider-Reisner Aircraft Co.

Rev. John B. Williams, Minister 50 Years, Dies

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., July 10.—The Rev. John B. Williams, 73, a minister of the gospel for nearly half a century, whose last charge was at Boyce, Clark County, before his retirement about a year ago, is dead at Brookneal, Campbell County. He is survived by his widow, two children, two step-children and a sister, Mrs. G. A. Bradley, of this city.

BEHIND THE SCREENS

With NELSON B. BELL

The decision to bring Dolores Del Rio to the Columbia Theater for a week of personal appearances, beginning Saturday, in conjunction with first Washington presentations of her latest starring vehicle, "Evangeline," must have been one of those eleventh-hour snap judgments, or else those in charge of her Eastern tour are less astute showmen than I have always deemed them.

Certainly, if the local engagement had been on the books a fortnight ago, the edge would not have been taken off Senorita Del Rio's presence four times a day on F street by bringing her over from Baltimore for part of a day to meet the President of the United States and such of the newspaper craft as could be pried out of bed as early as 10 a. m., and emblazoning her name on many otherwise somber pages of the local press.

However, that is what has happened, which, of course, is far less important than the fact that, after all, the picture-going public is to have the opportunity of at least seeing and hearing, if not actually meeting, one of the most prominent feminine stars of the screen.

Miss Del Rio, I am given to understand, is a young woman of admirable qualities whose tastes run more to the wholesome things of life than to the artificialities so often looked upon as inseparable from the theater. For instance, those enlisted to make her hotel reservations for the Washington sojourn were instructed specifically that tennis courts, swimming pools and golf links must be conveniently available. The distance from the theater should preferably be not short, in order that the drive to and from the daily appearances might be made as much of a refreshing respite as possible. Other stipulations were such as to confirm the belief that here is an actress bent on sane pursuits.

The party, which includes Senora Asunsolo, the star's mother; a personal maid, business representative and publicity expert—and perhaps other functionaries, for all I know—will arrive in this city tomorrow, the Cleveland engagement terminating today.

Tomorrow afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock—unless I am being given a nice ride on the merry-go-round, and don't think I've never been on one—Miss Del Rio will be informally "at home" to members of the press, and numerous others, in her hotel suite. Other engagements, too, are on the calendar for the day.

Saturday the week of personal appearance begins. What Miss Del Rio will do for the delectation of her admirers, and the exact hours at which she will do it, are for the moment matters of purely future concern.

If you think some of these play boys of the stage find it impossible to carry their clowning even so far as the alley stage door, after their allotted stint is done, you know less about them than you should.

It is doubtful if there was a more joyous celebrant at the orphans' outing given at Glen Echo Park by the Washington B. P. O. Elks yesterday than Herbert Rawlinson, master of ceremonies at the Palace. He was all over the place, making whoopee for the youngsters who get none too much of it through the year, and, so I am whispered by one who says he knows, was dated up by two or three of the more enterprising of the femmes of the party—aged, perhaps, 8 at the outside!

Oh, Mabelle, yoo-hoo! It wasn't Busch's beer garden over here in the same block with The Post where Zelaya banged that piano, but down at Stonestreet's on the Avenue, near Twelfth, where the little back room was up a few steps from the bar—only it wasn't a room and it wasn't little.

So I hear!

Since the motion picture theaters are the coolest places in town, you may be interested in next week's bookings, even if the mercury splashes right out of the top of the tube. So, then:

Columbia, Dolores Del Rio in "Evangeline," from the poem by Longfellow, and in person, beginning Saturday; Earle, Richard Dix and Esther Ralston in "The Wheel of Life," all-talkie; Fox Warner Baxter and Lois Moran, in "Behind That Curtain," by Earl Derr Biggers; Palace, Douglas MacLean and Marie Prevost, in "Divorce Made Easy," talkie-comedy; Metropolitan, "On With The Show," Warner Brothers' first all-talking, singing, dancing picture in natural colors, with Sam Hardy, Betty Compson, Sally O'Neil and all-star cast, held for the second week of what ought to be a record run.

Now that the heat wave is broken and it only registers 99 in the shade, I'm sorry I hocked the benny!

GIRL AND WORKMAN HURT AT ALEXANDRIA

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
312 S. Washington St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria, 523.

Two victims of serious accidents are being treated at the Alexandria Hospital, one, a 4-year-old girl, having been struck by a truck, and the other, a carpenter, having fallen from a scaffold while at work yesterday.

Little Harriet English, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James English, of 222 Jefferson street, was crossing the street in front of her home when she was struck by a truck driven by Henry Lee Scott, of Cottage Park. She sustained a fractured arm and leg, and severe bruises about the face. Scott placed the little girl in his truck and rushed her to the hospital, where she is being treated by Drs. M. D. Delany and T. Marshall Jones. Her condition was reported last night as favorable. Directly after the accident Scott made a report to police headquarters. Mr. and Mrs. English have been at the bedside of their daughter since the accident.

G. B. Wathem, who is employed on the building on King street being erected for the J. C. Penney Co., and whose address is 1601 U street southeast, Washington, fell from a temporary scaffold, landing about 20 feet, and sustained cuts on his head and injuries to his shoulder. Fellow workers picked him up and took him to the hospital in an automobile, where he was treated by Dr. S. B. Moore, who took five stitches in his head. His condition is regarded as satisfactory. Early reports were to the effect that he collapsed on account of the heat, but they were found to be erroneous, the accident having occurred early in the morning.

The work of remodeling St. Mary's Catholic Church, which was badly damaged by fire after being struck by lightning the evening of June 5, has been started, contracts having been awarded for the carpenter work, roofing and interior decoration. A contract for the installation of a new orgen to replace the one which was practically destroyed has also been placed with a Baltimore firm.

The Rev. W. A. McKeefrey, pastor of the church, stated yesterday that the church will be greatly beautified, and it is expected the work will be completed and the church ready for occupancy by October 7. Services are being held in Lyceum Hall while the church building is undergoing repairs.

The report of Dr. W. Lewis Schafer, city health officer, for June shows there were 38 births and 21 deaths reported during the month. The clinics being conducted by the department were attended by 367 persons.

One case of smallpox was reported, the first in several years, and the patient is now fully recovered, according to the report.

The city health nurse, Miss Marguerite Davis, reported having paid 200 visits during the new month, placarded 27 houses for contagious diseases and registered 38 new patients.

There were 45 cases of measles reported, 1 case of German measles, 6 of mumps, 9 of chicken pox and 1 each of scarlet fever and rabies.

The funeral of W. A. Smith, who died Sunday at Newcastle, Va., will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the funeral home, 809 Cameron street, conducted by the Rev Ernest M. Delaney, of the Second Presbyterian Church. Burial will be in Bethel Cemetery.

Martin Sherman, whose home is in the 400 block North Alfred street, who was charged with an attempted assault on his wife, was acquitted in police court yesterday morning. Police Justice W. S. Snow ruling the case had assumed the aspect of a domestic relations case. Two pistols found by the police in the home of the accused were on the desk, but there was no evidence to show that Sherman had attempted to use them.

Robert E. Knight will present the program at the Kiwanis luncheon meeting today at 12:30 at the George Mason Hotel. The club publication, issued weekly to the membership, is in the form of a special invitation to be present.

The daily vacation Bible school being conducted at the Presbyterian Chapel, Commerce and West streets, is asking for additional volunteer workers. The hours are from 9 a. m. until 12 noon, with a large attendance.

Daingerfield Carroll, 26 years old, colored, recently given 90 days on the chain gang for a violation of the prohibition law, escaped on Tuesday afternoon while working on the street with the gang.

Contributions are still being given to the McClary relief fund. The total yesterday was brought up to $4,756.64, with the largest single contribution, of $20, being anonymous.

Mr. Newcomb is survived by his wife, Jennie C. Newcomb; three sisters, Mrs. Alice R. Newcomb and Mrs. Robert Bozel, of this city, and Mrs. Virginia West, of Newport, Ky., and one brother, James R. Newcomb, of Prince George County; also a number of nieces and nephews.

Woman Hit by Auto Dies From Injuries

Rites for Mrs. Cora May Burrows Are to Be Held Today.

Funeral services for Mrs. Cora May Burrows, 60 years old, of Rockville, who died Tuesday night as the result of injuries suffered last Friday when she was dragged 15 feet by an automobile, will be held at 11 o'clock this morning at the Rockville Baptist Church. Mrs. Burrows at first was believed only slightly injured, but she was found to be more seriously injured Monday and was brought to a Washington hospital.

Mrs. Burrows and Miss Julia Moulden were boarding a bus in front of the Rockville Fair Grounds when they were struck by a machine operated by Wayne Bond, of Morrisdale, Pa., who swerved to the right of the bus to avoid striking another automobile. Miss Moulden was cut and bruised.

Bond was charged with reckless driving and F. I. Forsht, owner of the car, of Altoona, Pa., was charged with failing to provide proper brakes. Both were released to appear in Rockville Police Court. More serious charges probably will be preferred against Bond, police say.

Prison Term Greets Home-Town Visitor

Harrisonburg, Va., July 10.—C. O. Jackson, negro, after spending some time in the North, returned to his old home town last June 16 to enjoy a few days' vacation among his old friends. He was too boisterous upon his return, however, and engaged in a fight, during which he slashed Goldie Payne with a knife. As a result, he will spend the next 18 months in Virginia, in a State convict camp. In Circuit Court yesterday Jackson was convicted of felonious assault.

Another 18-month sentence was meted out yesterday when Ernest Howdyshell pleaded guilty to a charge of housebreaking in connection with the burglarizing of the Wintermyer store at Ottobine, 8 miles west of here. Howdyahell's loot was valued at $8.

CLARENDON IS FACED WITH FIREMEN LOSS

Division of Funds From Sale of Hall Are Needed to Keep Department on Job.

FAIRFAX CHAMBER VOTES

ARLINGTON COUNTY,
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 309. Clarendon, Va.

Unless there is a reasonable division of the funds derived from the sale of the Clarendon Community Hall, in which the Clarendon Fire Department housed its equipment, to aid in the erection of a new firemen's hall, Clarendon faces the danger of being without a fire department, it was learned last night.

With a reasonable division of funds given to the fire department, it is possible that the board of supervisors will give favorable consideration to a plan to assist in the erection of the building, Supervisor B. M. Hedrich said last night. "But the citizens of the community should be satisfied and also should know what is to be done with the balance of the money," he added.

Discussing the proposal made at the meeting of the citizens association Monday night that $3,500 be appropriated, providing a like amount is raised by the fire department, Richard L. Eacho, of Ashton Heights, said:

"The funds which purchased the community hall, which has been sold recently, were raised by carnivals in which the fire department played the leading part, and it seems to me that the citizens in mass meting should have a voice in the distribution of these funds.

"In Clarendon and the surrounding territory, including Lyon Park, Ashton Heights, Lyon Village and Aurora Heights, there are hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of property which looks to the Clarendon Fire Department for protection. These communities helped raise the funds that made the building possible. Now that it has been sold, they should have a voice in how the money is to be expended.

It is announced that there will be a special meeting tomorrow night of the holding corporation and the citizens association to ratify the action of the corporation, which has recommended that $2,800 be appropriated, provided the fire department raises a like amount.

Edmund H. Allen, of Newington, Va., has been elected president of the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce.

Martin T. Webb, past president and who was urged to accept another term, was prevailed upon to accept the office of first vice president. Will Cleveland was elected second vice president; R. R. Buckley, of Fairfax, treasurer, and Mrs. E. D. Vosbury, of Merrifield, secretary.

The question of the appointment of a full-time secretary will be considered at a future meeting.

Directors elected to fill the six vacancies are: Thomas R. Keith, Providence district; J. Sidney Wiley, Lee district; Miss Gladys Winfield, Centerville district; F. H. Wilkinson, Dranesville district, and C. H. Powell, Falls Church.

The president announced the appointment of a special committee consisting of Mrs. G. Ashley Money, Capt. Thurlow White, Will Cleveland, and Mrs. E. D. Vosbury to cooperate with Robert D. Graham, secretary of the Fairfax County Fair Association, in the preparation of a Chamber of Commerce program during the fair to be held in September.

The Sons and Daughters of Liberty will meet tonight in the Odd Fellows Hall at Clarendon. The newly-elected officers will be installed.

Word was received in Clarendon yesterday that Douglas G. Gilbert, of Clarendon, son of Curtis I. Gilbert, has been admitted to the second company at West Point by orders issued by Maj. Gen. William P. Smith, superintendent. Gilbert was appointed to West Point by the War Department from the National Guard.

A. E. Durham was arrested yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Harry L. Woodyard on a charge of grand larceny. He was later released on $1,000 bond pending a hearing today before Police Judge Harry R. Thomas.

The Arlington County Zoning Commission will hold its weekly meeting at the courthouse tomorrow night at 7:45 o'clock to make a further study of the maps as prepared by the county engineers looking to the final zoning of the county. The commission announces that it has changed its meeting night from Monday to Friday.

County officials and citizens interested in the question of zoning are invited to attend all meetings of the commission.

The East Arlington Colored Fire Company will meet tonight in its firehouse to consider plans for the holding of a carnival the latter part of the month to raise funds for the erection of a new firemen's hall.

Miss Mary Lippard, home demonstration agent for Fairfax County, who has held the office since January, 1927, has resigned, effective August 15.

The Fairfax County Republican Club will hold a meeting tonight in the Odd Fellows Hall, Falls Church. J. Barton Phillips, of Alexandria, will speak.

Mrs. Nora Allison has been reelected president of the Fairfax County Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy. Other officers are Mrs. L. B. Eaton, vice president; Miss Mamie Wiley, secretary, and Miss Lillian Millan, treasurer.

Mrs. Mary G. Trice has been elected treasurer of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Arlington Fire Department, filling the vacancy caused by Mrs. Emma S. Blackmer declining to accept the office. The other officers are Mrs. Margaret S. Tapp, president; Mrs. Elinor Scheffel, vice president; Mrs. A. L. Brooks, secretary, and Mrs. R. J. Burgdoff, corresponding secretary.

WOMAN, BOY DROWN; THIRD BARELY SAVED

Mrs. Disney Revived After Her Attempt to Prevent Tragedy Near Annapolis.

CRAMPS ATTACK BLAMED

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., July 10.—Two outings near here were turned into tragedies today when a woman and a boy were drowned and a third death was narrowly averted when rescuers pulled the apparently lifeless body of a second woman from the water after she had made a vain attempt to rescue her sister.

Mrs. Anna Boyer, 42 years old, of Severn Run, Anne Arundel County, and J. Marshall McCauley, Jr., 19 years old, 1940 Haddon avenue, Baltimore, were the victims, while Mrs. E. M. Disney, 40 years old, of Odenton, is recovering at Emergency Hospital here following her harrowing experience.

Mrs. Disney Under 10 Minutes.

Mrs. Boyer was drowned in the Severn River at Herald Harbor Beach, when, it is believed, she was seized by cramps while a considerable distance from the shore. Mrs. Disney made a desperate effort to save her sister but was unable to do so. It was 10 minutes before rescuers, putting out from the shore, were able to bring in Mrs. Disney. Mrs. Boyer's body has not yet been recovered.

Dr. Charles Bradshaw, of Crownsville State Hospital, using a pulmotor brought from the Glenburnie Fire Department by Earl Neal, was able to revive Mrs. Disney only after much effort.

The two women were members of a family party having a picnic at the beach. Ruth Disney, 18 years old, and Dorothy Warfield, 17 years old, a friend of the Disneys, were in the water at the time but were unable to give any assistance before Mrs. Boyer went down.

Drowned Youth Pastor's Son.

The McCauley boy was drowned in the Magothy River, at Mago Vista, 12 miles north of here. He is the son of the Rev. J. Marshall McCauley, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer of Baltimore.

Members of the Sunday school of that church were having a picnic and McCauley, who could not swim well, was in apparently shallow water when he suddenly disappeared. It is believed he stepped off a shelf on the bottom of the river.

His body was recovered half an hour later by Joseph Snyder in 14 feet of water. Efforts to revive him were vain, and Police Justice Oscar L. Hatton, of Severn Park, acting as coroner, issued a certificate of accidental death.

KING'S HEALTH AGAIN CREATES MISGIVINGS

Doctors' Silence Over X-Ray Tests Gives Rise to Doubts in London Circle.

TRIP FOUND IMPOSSIBLE

London, July 10 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Unexplained and unexpected silence today on the part of King George's doctors regarding the conclusions they have reached from study of X-ray photographs taken of his majesty Monday has added to the uneasiness felt in well-informed circles here tonight regarding the British monarch's health.

Though no public announcement has been made here, it has been learned that Sir Hugh Rigby, the king's surgeon, and Lord Dawson of Penn, his chief physician, made another thorough examination of the sovereign tonight—a fact which seems to suggest that the royal doctors may be in disagreement as to whether or not the X-ray pictures indicate the necessity for another operation to remove what are believed to be small pieces of diseased bone in the right chest cavity.

Meanwhile, Lord Lascelles, the king's son-in-law, rather let the cat out, of the bag today in remarks he made at a public gathering at Harrowgate, in the course of which he said:

Fears Journey, Says Lascelles.

"You will all recognize that the news received on Monday of the king's postponed visit to Sandringham was due not exactly to a sudden crisis in his illness, but rather to recognition of the fact that his progress toward convalescence will be slow and that a long journey such as that to Sandringham could not be undertaken by him at the present moment."

This revelation shows an interesting lack of teamwork between Lord Lascelles and the king's doctors, who, in an official bulletin they signed Monday explaining the changed plans, said that the king was not fatigued by the thanksgiving services of the day before, that his general health was good, but that in view of the state of the sinus (left by the operation performed last December) and the necessity of taking fresh X-ray pictures, the Sandringham trip would be postponed for a short time.

As a matter of fact, as was reported at the time, and as is emphasized again tonight on good authority, the King's triumphant drive through London on his return from Windsor, followed by his participation in the Thanksgiving service in Westminster Abbey last Sunday, left him in such a state of nervous exhaustion that, aside from the condition of the sinus, the journey to Sandringham was made absolutely impossible and is causing his doctors considerable anxiety.

No Statements Forthcoming.

It is also interesting to note that no inspired statements came from Buckingham Palace today regarding the King having followed his "usual routine," such as was put out yesterday. Nor was any indication given as to whether he spent the day in the palace gardens or in bed.

It is understood further that some of the King's physicians felt at the time that a second operation should have been performed upon the monarch at Windsor at the end of May, when a second abscess formed under the scar of the previous abscess in the right chest cavity, and that one reason for hesitating about operating now is the King's general weakness.

$1,000,000 Offered Elks' Charity Fund

Los Angeles, Calif., July 10 (A.P.).—While officers of the grand lodge formally submitted their annual reports, the great body of Elks attending the 65th annual convention here turned today to a round of varied entertainment.

The reports included data on membership, new lodges, charitable enterprises, new legislation and increased activities. Among those was the statement of retiring grand exalted ruler, Murray Hulbert, that an unnamed Eastern millionaire had offered $1,000,000 to the Elks charity program.

The installation of the officers elected yesterday will take place at the final session of the grand lodge tomorrow. The new body is headed by grand exalted ruler-elect Col. Walter P. Andrews, of Atlanta, Ga.

receipt of a number of letters from mothers complaining about the drinking habits of their young daughters.

In connection with the number of speakeasies here, there is now in progress a merry word war between two well-known reformers—Clinton N. Howard, chairman of the national committee for law and order, and Harry N. Douthitt, now a publisher, but once chief investigator for the Citizens Service Association, the members of which were called "snoopers" by the wets.

Howard claims that he had an agent purchase liquor in more than 300 places here. Douthitt, who now edits a magazine devoted to the activities of the local police department, declares that Howard's statement is "preposterous" and takes Howard severely to task for having made it.

Associated with Mrs. Sabin in the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform are a host of well-known women leaders, including Dr. Josephine Baker, distinguished woman physician and humanitarian; Mrs. Sidney Borg, well-known civic and charity worker; Mrs. Cortlandt Nicoll, outstanding Republican worker; Mrs. Rogers H. Bacon, educator and philanthropist; Mrs. Helen Hartley Jenkins, whose benefactions exceed $100,000 a year; Miss Anne Morgan, famous war worker and social worker, and Dr. Virginia C. NEW COMMISSIONER OF CUSTOMS

Henry Miller Service.

CAPT. FRANK A. EBLE,

$7,000,000 BANK FAILURE LAID TO STATE OFFICIAL

upon which to base concrete charges against them.

General Sessions Judge Francis X. Mancuso, chairman of the City Trust Board, drew the following caustic rebuke in the Moreland Commissioner's report:

"Judge Mancuso deserves censure for his lack of frankness and accuracy, for indifference and neglect of his banking duties, and for being a mere catspaw at a time when his position in the bank, in the community and on the bench required that he exercise leadership and responsibility for the protection of depositors and stockholders who were attracted and lulled into a sense of security by his name."

Edward F. Glynn, nephew of former Gov. Smith, is described by Mr. Moses as "another Ferrari catspaw, used for his experience in the banking department and because his name was valuable."

Mr. Moses charges that Glynn accepted a $5,000 yearly retainer from Ferrari while he was getting $5,000 as a special deputy attorney general, that Glynn made $12,000 profit in a joint-stock account operated by Ferrari, and that the testimony of the young lawyer regarding special fees from Ferrari "was not convincing."

Mr. Moses' roster of those responsible for the crash also includes H. Warren Hubbard, Tammany district leader, who was a director of the bank, and every other director and officer of the City Trust Co. Michael F. Laura, deputy street cleaning commissioner, is severely criticised in another part of the report.

"Up to the present time," Mr. Moses says in regard to possible punishment of the directors, "there appears no basis for holding or indicting Judge Macuso or any other member of the board of directors, as such. Although the statute requires that each director of a trust company take an oath that he will diligently and honestly administer its affairs, the courts hold that a neglect of the general duty so assumed is not in itself an indictable offense.

"If, therefore, the directors escape prosecution, it will be due to the weakness of the law, and not to any particular virtue of their own. In any event, there is ample ground for civil action against all of them."

Equally significant with Mr. Moses' charges against individuals are his recommendations for the reform of the State banking department and the laws governing it, especially in view of the recent failure of Clarke Brothers, a private bank.

Mr. Moses asks that all private banks be put under State or Federal supervision. He says bluntly, "There is no good reason for them." Among the banks which should be immediately placed under supervision, the Moreland commissioner includes the great financial institutions of Wall street and the very small houses outside of the cities which do not come under the regulation of the State department.

Supreme Court Justice Cropsey, sitting as a committing magistrate today, held Anthony Di Paola, former treasurer of the City Trust Co., for the grand jury on two charges of forgery and two misdemeanors. The $23,000 bond was supplied by Vincenzo Guida.

Frederico F. Ferrari, brother of the late Francesco M. Ferrari, president of the City Trust, was held in $3,500 bail for special sessions on a misdemeanor charge.

Isidore Siegeltuch, counsel and director for the City Trust, was held for special sessions on a charge of floating a false loan of $375,000 for the Jalna Realty Co., one of Ferrari's many interests. Siegeltuch's bail was $2,000.

U. S. FLIERS LAND AT ROME AFTER FLIGHT FROM SPAIN

American Embassy, was there as representative of Ambassador Fletcher. After he had welcomed the fliers he took them to the Excelsior Hotel and installed them in a three-room suite blazing with red and gold furniture.

Just as soon as the Pathfinder's wheels touched the ground, the erstwhile patient crowd made one big rush. They elbowed out of their way a double row of carabiniers, nearly a full regiment of steel-helmeted soldiers, a big detachment of Rome's metropolitan police and a horde of special deputies in plain clothes who were there to guard Mussolini.

The last lap of the flight from Old Orchard duplicated the long hop across the Atlantic in that no one knew anything certain about the progress of the plane until it appeared ready for landing.

The explanation was that the aviators kept high in the air in trying to avoid the strong headwinds.

Both fliers were tired, but extremely happy.

"I am glad we have done it," continued Yancey. "I am only sorry that we could not make it in one hop. If we could have taken off in the Pathfinder with the load of fuel that we tried to carry in the Green Flash, we would have made Rome in one jump easily."

A suggestion that they might try flying back to the United States caused both Yancey and Williams to shake their heads.

"We would try that if we could get off with a load of 500 gallons of gas, but that can't be done," explained the captain.

The aviators have no immediate plans, their social engagements for the moment being in the hands of the American Embassy. One of their early engagements probably will be dinner with Undersecretary Balbo. That official drove to their hotel with them and proffered the invitation, accompanying it with the typical Roman salute of a kiss on both cheeks of each.

Capt. Yancey was asked if he and Williams had considered trying for the prize of $25,000 offered by Coy. W. D Easterwood, of Dallas, Tex., for a flight from this city to Dallas via New York. He said the same consideration would apply to that as to any project for going home by plane from this trip, the minimum requirement being 500 gallons of gas.

"There is, however, a flight that we are thinking about trying," said Yancey, "and it is not as difficult as it sounds. Col. Easterwood has offered a prize of $50,000 for a flight from Dallas to Hong Kong, China. There are three jumps in this, and we believe we could make them."

After a few days' rest in Rome, the aviators may make an air tour of some of the nearby Italian centers. After that they will ship the Pathfinder home and then take a ship home themselves.

POINCARE TO BATTLE DEBT RESERVATIONS

CABINET MUSTERS HELP

Paris, July 10 (A.P.).—The issue between the government of Premier Poincare and the opposition in Parliament as to how the debt accords with the United States and Great Britain should be ratified, was squarely defined today on the eve of the opening of the momentous debate. The foreign relations committee decided by 15 to 4, with 5 not voting, that reservations must be put into the ratification bill.

M. Poincare will oppose this. He again announced that he would stake the life of his government on the issue.

The reservations to which the committee vote applied were declarations that France never should be called upon to pay more in debt settlements than she receives as reparations from Germany.

There also was some talk of another reservation providing for a moratorium whenever the capacity of France to pay is not equal to the installments due under the debt accord.

The premier insists that no reservations of any kind must be inserted in the text of the ratification bill. He holds that it is useless to qualify the ratification of settlements which were entered into in good faith by all concerned, but he will consent to the passage of separate resolutions expressing any sentiment upon which the Chamber may wish to go on record.

Conservative opinion around the lobbies tonight was that the government would muster a small, but sure, majority for unqualified ratification. While some of the hitherto stanch adherents of the Poincare administration have expressed themselves in favor of reservations, yet other groups have let it be known that they would come to the aid of the cabinet. It was reckoned that there were enough of these latter to overcome defections in the normal government bloc.

Indian Rum Traffic Bared to Senators

Wisconsin Witnesses Also Describe the Neglect of Needy Redskins.

Lac du Flambeau, Wis., July 10 (A.P.).—Charges that United States Indian officers on the Bad River Reservation, near Ashland, Wis., make no effort to suppress liquor traffic there, were made here today by witnesses in the United States Senate Indian Affairs subcommittee investigation into conditions of Indian reservations in northern Wsconsin.

Earlier in the day stories of alleged apathy of the Federal Indian Bureau toward aiding indigent and sick tribe members were told to the committee members, Senators Lynn Frazier, North Dakota, Robert M. La Follette, Wisconsin, and Burton K. Wheeler, Montana.

It was pointed out that counties in northern Wisconsin have been shouldering the burden for caring for Indians. Senator Wheeler, on hearing of the conditions, declared "the Government of the United States should not permit the Indian, a Federal ward, to be the object of county charity."

Mrs. Veronica Raische, Odanah, told of alleged inattention to sick Indians and said men in automobiles swoop into town, pick up young Indian girls and bring them back intoxicated.

Suicide Kills Man, Wounds Own Wife

Miner Opens Fire When Reconciliation Effort Proves Futile.

Cordova, Ala., July 10 (A.P.).—Tom Jones, 40 years old, miner, killed John Pate, 55, brick yard employe, shot his estranged wife with a shotgun and then killed himself here today. The triple shooting occurred at Mrs. Jones' boarding house and was witnesses by a number of persons.

Mrs. Jones was wounded critically and was taken to a Birmingham hospital.

Witnesses said Jones fired both barrels of a shotgun into Pate's head as the victim sat in a chair on the front porch of the boarding house where he also lived. Jones is said to have reloaded the gun and walked into the house, shooting the woman twice. He then walked about 100 yards from the house, where he reloaded the weapon and fired both barrels into his own body.

Officers attributed the shooting to Jones' inability to effect a reconciliation with his wife.

Slayer of Coed Seeks Postponement of Trial

Columbus, July 10 (A.P.).—A motion seeking postponement of the trial of Dr. James H. Snook, deposed university professor and confessed slayer of his coed paramour, Thsora K. Hix, 25, set for July 22, was filed in Common Pleas Court here today.

Dr. Snook's attorneys claim that the defense alienists can not make a proper finding before July 22 and that public sentiment is such now that a fair and impartial trial could not be had on the date set.

Judge Henry L. Scarlett will hear arguments on the motion tomorrow.

Chinese Minister Wu yesterday officially suspended Ying Kao, Chinese vice consul at San Francisco, pending an investigation of charges his wife had smuggled opium into the United States.

A statement issued by the Minister late yesterday said: "In view of the alleged smuggling of opium into the United States involving the wife of the Chinese vice consul at San Francisco the Chinese Minister has suspended Ying Kao from his duties pending a thorough investigation."

Newlywed Is Drowned In Serenaders' Prank

Jenkins, N. Y., July 10 (A.P.).—David Hughes, a 23-year-old bridegroom, was drowned last night when a party of friends threw him into the lake after serenading him and his bride at their newly established home here.

After an investigation police today arrested William Wright, 25, and James Farmer, 27, both married men with families, as the instigators of the fatal prank. Hughes had wed about a month ago, but the marriage was not announced until this week. After the serenade the party threw him into the lake. He sank and did not come up.

Several of the serenaders dived and the body was recovered. All efforts to revive him failed.

Reduce the Acid

In sick stomachs—instantly

Sick stomachs, sour stomachs and indigestion usually mean excess acid. The stomach nerves are over-stimulated. Too much acid makes the stomach and intestines sour.

Alkali kills acid instantly. The best form is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia, because one harmless, tasteless dose neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Since its invention, 50 years ago, it has remained the standard with physicians everywhere.

Take a spoonful in water and your unhappy condition will probably end in five minutes. Then you will always know what to do. Crude and harmful methods will never appeal to you. Go prove this for your own sake. It may save a great many disagreeable hours.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any druggists.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

French Find Drugs Sent To Former Afghan Envoy

Paris, July 10 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Discovery of $30,000 worth of heroin and cocaine in four packing cases addressed to the former Afghan minister here has shocked diplomatic circles in Paris.

When the cases arrived in Paris for Sirdar Al Ghulam Nabi Khan, the French customs authorities looked on them with suspicion and held up delivery pending consultation of the foreign office. The Quai d'Orsay said that on no account must diplomatic immunity be violated.

But while the boxes were being handled—roughly, no doubt—one of them burst open and some white powder filtered out. It was analyzed and found to be heroin. All four cases were then opened. They were filled with heroin and cocaine.

Daughter of Hertz Held in Auto Crash

Kin of Taxicab King Cashes $1,000 Check for Bail; Woman Injured.

Chicago, July 10 (A.P.).—Miss Dorothy Wilson, 20-year-old daughter of the wealthy head of Wilson Bros., manufacturers, was injured today when her automobile collided with that of Miss Helen Hertz, 19, daughter of John Hertz, sportsman and retired president of the Yellow Cab Co.

Miss Hertz was arrested on charges of driving through a stop sign and assault with a deadly weapon, for which she put up a $1,000 cash bond.

The Wilson car, driven by a chauffeur, was turned over and the girl was thrown through a window. She was badly cut and was injured internally, her physician said. The chauffeur also was injured.

Miss Hertz was permitted to go to a bank in Evanston, where the accident occurred, to cash her $1,000 check and her trial was set for July 17.

Milton Wilson, father of the injured girl, is on the West coast.

Six Killed, 26 Injured By Nippon Landslide

Tokyo, July 10 (A.P.).—Official dispatches state that six persons were killed in the prefecture of Kagoshima last night in a landslide which struck a fishing village.

Twenty-six persons were injured and five are missing. Thirty-one buildings collapsed.

MANY DISEASES LAID TO INDISCREET DIETS

CANCER 'CURES' ASSAILED

Portland, Oreg., July 10 (A.P.).—Although most Americans have advanced beyond the fried potatoes and pie breakfast, there still is a tendency toward a diet conducive to degenerative diseases, Dr. Lovell Langstroth, San Francisco, told members of the American Medical Association here today.

Dr. Langstroth said that a study of 501 sick persons revealed that 88 per cent of them ate chiefly bread, meat, potatoes, sweet desserts and other foods poor in vitamins. Many of them improved on a diet of fresh milk, fruits and vegetables, he said.

Dr. E. T. Quigley, instructor in the University of Nebraska Medical School, who has done extensive research work in cancer, said that so many "sure cures" for cancer have been announced or are about to be announced that sufferers are under the impression that "the day of salvation is just around the corner."

"This state of mind," Dr. Quigley said, "is what makes it so easy for the quack to market at a huge profit his utterly worthless nostrums.

"When the medical profession ceased seeking a cure and turned to the cause of cancer, the death rate slowed up. Primarily there seems to be four causes. Constant irritation of tissue, chemical irritation, and heat and infection," he added.

Dr. Quigley advised watching the diet and consuming sufficient vitamins to ward off a possible attack. Such things as white bread and sugar, the doctor said, give the cancer an oppportunity to gain a foothold in the body, where vitamins tend to obliterate it.

Dr. Albert Soiland, Los Angeles, urged the increased use of the X ray and radium in the treatment of disease and said the use calls for a special medical field of radiation. Dr. Soiland said that although most laymen associate the use of radium with cancer, it has been found to be valuable in the treatment of other skin diseases.

FOREIGN TARIFF BLUFFS.

Foreign governments are not backward in asking tariff favors from the United States. With a selfish emphasis that would do credit to any domestic interest that is charged with trying to grab special favors, the foreign governments specify what advantages they desire in the American market. Some of them put up a poor mouth, others offer tempting reciprocal concessions, and a few make threats of reprisals.

Among the governments that hope to gain special favors in the American market, and the articles affected, are the following:

Belgium—Leather, chemical products, asbestos, cement, rabbit skins, preserved vegetables, rayon, floor coverings and rugs, photo products, window and plate glass, wire netting, bone glue.

Netherlands—Glassware, brick, tulip bulbs, linseed oil.

Austria—Hides, felt hats.

Greece—Rugs.

Denmark—Cement.

Mexico—Cattle, tomatoes.

Persia—Rugs.

It will be noted that many agricultural products are in the lists of foreign governments. What do these governments care for American agriculture? They are concerned with their own farmers. If Congress should pay heed to these foreign demands, American farm relief through the tariff would go glimmering.

American manufacturers are entitled to protection against competing foreign articles produced by labor that is paid less than American labor. The working men of this country have a right to demand that American factories shall be kept in operation. Poverty pleas and threats of retaliation should have no effect upon Congress in doing its full duty toward the farmers, manufacturers and workers of America.

In the economic struggle the United States can hold its own with other nations. If the proposed new tariff were outrageous, and intended to exclude rather than limit the importation of foreign goods, it would be well to study closely the foreign communications. But there is no intention on the part of Congress to levy war against foreign goods. The foreign clamor is premature and in some cases is obviously intended to intimidate Congress.

The American market belongs to Americans. They should monopolize it to the extent of their ability. It is worth more to Americans than all the other markets in the world. Congress should not yield an inch to any foreign plea of poverty, reciprocal advantage, or threat of retaliation. "Home first, the world afterward" is a rule that is not only prudent, but absolutely imperative if the workers of the United States, on farms and in industry, are to be prosperous.

There will be no retaliation worth mentioning if the United States will go ahead and provide suitable tariff protection for all its producers. Such retaliation as may be attempted may be very costly to the foreign government concerned. With its own market served by its own people, and with its production costs cut down by mass production, energetic workers and cheap raw materials, the United States can face with equanimity any tariff war that foreign nations may undertake. Experience proves, however, that threatened tariff wars rarely materialize. The foreign pleas and threats are mostly bluff.

IN CONGRESS' KEEPING.

The fact that it has been found impossible to keep the District budget to within the $48,000,000 fixed by the Commissioners should occasion no surprise. In the eleventh hour of whipping it into shape it has been found necessary to add some $200,000 for improvements regarded as indispensable. The Public Utilities Commission, for example, has requested an additional appropriation of $25,000 with which to increase its personnel and, in view of the important investigations it faces, it would seem the part of wisdom that the increase be allowed. If the $48,200,000 budget is allowed, it will represent the largest in the history of the District.

The District is growing. Every indication points to the fact that it will require continually larger expenditures. But where are increased revenues to be obtained? Income from taxes, as the District grows, will increase, but in view of the dual nature of Washington, municipality and seat of government, it does not seem likely that increased income from taxes will provide the revenues necessary to operate the local government. The $48,000,000 figure was fixed upon as the limit that could be obtained without raising the tax rate and provided the Federal Government continued the appropriation of $9,000,000. But $48,000,000 is found to be not quite enough for the "indispensables" and there is not much reason even to hope that Congress will see fit to raise the $9,000,000 lump sum.

A $200,000 addition to a $48,000,000 budget is not large enough to cause any considerable inconvenience even if it is allowed, but it does serve to indicate that the tendency of budgetary requirements is upward, presenting a problem for which there seem to be but three possible solutions. If the tax rate were raised, additional revenues might be obtained, but the tax rate is high already and if it were further increased the hardship would be considerable. Expenditures might be severely restricted, but the District already is operating on a starvation diet, its schools neglected and "indispensable" improvements postponed, and if expenditures are further restricted the development of the National Capital will be stunted. There remains but one other solution to the problem presented by the steadily increasing financial requirement. If Congress will take a broader view of Washington's needs, determining to work hand in hand with local citizens in building the finest Capital in the world, the financial problem would vanish. In Congress' keeping lies the future of Washington.

EYESIGHT OF MOTORISTS.

An expert in England who has studied the relation of vision to motoring accidents for fifteen years has arrived at the conclusion that a considerable number of the motorists who are driving today are risking their own lives and those of others because of imperfect eyesight. Many of these persons do not realize that their vision is defective, and defects which pass unnoticed in ordinary affairs may be responsible for serious crashes on the highways.

In this country the vision of motorists is a much more important issue because of the greater congestion of highways. A recent report of the National Advisory Commission on Vision read before the American Optometric Association estimated that 5,000 lives could be saved during the coming year if sight tests were required of all motorists in the United States. The association went on record as favoring visual examination for color blindness as well as myopia and the more common defects.

Nine States and the District of Columbia require eyesight tests of prospective motorists. The commission on vision claims that the results of these examinations can be seen in the death rates from automobile accidents in the large cities. Among cities with over 350,000 inhabitants Washington had the lowest death rate, followed by Baltimore, Boston and Philadelphia, all of which have eyesight tests. The rate for Chicago, which has no test of vision, almost doubled that of Washington. Cleveland and other cities which neglect to examine the eyes of motorists show a high death rate.

It must be remembered that numerous other factors enter into the automobile death rate. Many of the States which require no eye examination do not require drivers' licenses. The first step is to secure uniform licensing of motorists. In doing this the visual requirements of safe motoring should not be overlooked.

NEW YORK'S SECRET POLICE.

New York police are baffled by the activities of the underworld. They do not know what is going on among racketeers, gangsters, thugs and their associates. Consequently when a crime is committed in the underworld they have no means of tracing out its source. Unsolved murders furnish ample evidence of the impenetrable mystery that envelops gangland. The establishment of a bureau of secret police by Commissioner Whalen is recognition of the necessity of using new methods in coping with the modern criminal.

It must be generally recognized that a policeman has no chance of familiarizing himself with the doings of the underworld. More than any other person, he is shunned by professional criminals. If the police are to be informed on customs, rendezvous and plans of gangdom, they must get their information from persons whose connection with the force remains unknown. It is a common practice for law enforcement officers to hire "undercover" men, but too often they are inadequately trained and their identity does not remain obscure for any length of time. It remains to be seen whether Commissioner Whalen has devised a plan which will enable officers to deal intelligently with underworld cases.

The new bureau of secret police is to be modeled after the Army Intelligence Service, the undercover bureaus of Scotland Yard and the United States Treasury Department. Fifty young men, graduates of the police academy, will initiate the scheme and if it proves successful the personnel will be enlarged. The identity of the secret police will be known only to the commanding officer and Commissioner Whalen. They will go into the underworld unarmed to associate with gangsters, narcotic vendors, bandits and professional killers. Their sole duty will be to learn the secrets of the underworld and secretly report to their commander through an elaborate system of relays. As soon as the identity of a secret officer is learned he will be replaced. It will not likely be necessary, however, to dismiss many men who are exposed. Gangland has a way of its own for disposing of its betrayers.

The wisdom of Commissioner Whalen's announcement of his detailed plans is open to question. If organized racketeers consider it worth while to discover the identity of the secret officers they might investigate all the graduates of the police academy. At any rate, they will be on guard against fraternizing with any newcomers, especially if they be inexperienced in underworld life. The secret officers themselves are embarking on hazardous careers with great odds against them. But if they can make any progress toward prevention of crime or more efficient detection of criminals the whole country will want to know about it.

A GREAT FLYING YACHT

Wireless to New York Times.

Friedrichshafen, July 9.—The mystery which has been hanging over the Dornier Co.'s newest airplane creation was lifted at last today when the press was permitted to see the great DX machine this afternoon at the company's Swiss plant at Altonqhein.

Although some of the gigantic craft's dimensions were already known, the first impression the visitor gets when entering its vast hangar is amazement at its overwhelming size. But after climbing for an hour through the ship's interior and through th elabyrinth of gangways, decks, corridors, motor gondolas and wings astonishment grows and with it admiration for the tremendous work accomplished.

The ship's hull does not differ greatly from that of any ordinary sea vessel with its deep keel and "eyes" for anchors, and it appears plausible that the DX will easily cut the waves of what is called a sea of forces or force 4—of near-gale intensity.

Despite its bulk, the ship's body does not look clumsy at all, but resembles that of a slender racing yacht. The spread of the wings is astounding, and towering thirteen feet above the hull's bottom are six motor gondolas resembling conning towers. Even the tail, despite its weight, is graceful.

Entering the ship through a corridor which cuts the middle or main deck, exclusively reserved for passengers, into two parts of unequal size one looks in vain for cabins such as are found on Zeppelins. While partitions already are visible where the frames of sections have been fixed, they are as yet uncovered, the ceiling is missing and innumerable electric wires, pipes and steel cables are visible.

The smaller one of two rooms in front is brighter than the other, as it has more windows and apparently intended to be a dining parlor and reading room. In front of this room and beneath it baggage will be stored.

On the other side of the corridor staterooms and berths will be installed. Below this room are four huge tanks with a capacity of 3,000 liters (nearly 800 gallons) of benzine each and two smaller ones of a capacity of 2,000 liters, bringing th etotal amount of fuel to 1,600 liters, which is considered sufficient to carry 120 passengers and their baggage a distance of 650 miles. With a smaller number of passengers the radius can be increased.

Behind the large passengers' room is a small electric kitchen and a few small rooms for various purposes.

From the corridor leads a small ladder to the upper deck which is reserved for the crew. The pilot's room, which is in the front and the brightest room on the ship, owing to the large number of windows which are arranged in a semicircle, contrasts greatly with other pilot's cabins.

Outside of two chairs and two gas switches at each side, there are only three or four instruments, including a compass, a balance apparatus for foggy weather and a sign board for the commander's signals.

With one switch the pilot is able to shut six motors off, vary the gas or stop a particular motor. In case of emergency or while landing, all twelve motors can be stopped by pushing a single knob.

Thus the steering is just as easy as with a small two-motored plane, and the steering wheel is so light that a child would be able to move it.

Next to the pilot's room is the cabin of the commander and the assistant navigation officer. This room is only separated from the pilot's by a screen which permits the commander to observe the pilot and the ship's nose to determine the course.

The adjoining room is the most important of all. It contains the main switchboards, the machinery for controlling the motor units, &c.

An engineer in charge is being assisted by four mechanicians who are constantly occupied attending to the twelve motors and the accessories. To get into the motor gondolas, men must crawl on all fours through the wings, but after reaching the gondolas they are able to stand upright or sit down on the ladder. The number of wires concentrated in each gondola is surprising.

A small door leads from the gondola onto the wings and gives the men access to every part of the motors, propellers, &c. Each gondola contains two motors of nine cylinders each. A four-pieced propeller is at each end of the motors, one in front of the wings, the other behind.

Behind the machinery room is a radio station for one operator. This brings the crew up to ten men. The lower deck contains space for fuel tanks, provisions, sea equipment and supplementary articles.

The chief pilot, Herr Wagner, will probably take the DX for its first test Thursday to familiarize himself with all the parts, while an actual take-off from the water will not take place before next week.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

A MIDLE-AGED GOLFER'S PLEA.

I do not ask in whimpering tones
To drive a ball like Bobby Jones.
I ceased to hope long years ago
For cups which I could proudly show.
With fancies sweet, but false, no more
I soothe my spirit faint and sore.
My limitations I have found,
I don't expect a brilliant round,
Nor do I think I ought to be
As long as Hagen from the tee.

Ye gods of golf, I do not pray
To beat the champions when I play.
I've no delusions now. My game
I know is middle-aged and tame,
I'm through with thinking that I might
Ascend to golfdom's topmost height,
Such lovely dreams to youth I leave,
Let him who can such goals achieve,
I only ask my game to be
A credit to my company.

Grant this, ye gods of golf, I pray
A game that is worth while to play,
In four-ball matches, now and then
Let me keep up with other men.
Let me have skill enough to share
The odds my partner has to bear.
Grant me the courage and the wit
To make a decent match of it.
I ask but this, that I shall be Fit for a golfer's company.

To Follow a Thought Wherever It Leads Is to Play the Game of the Mighty.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THE new president of Chicago University says the chief business of a college is to teach young men the art of thinking.

Many other educators have said the same thing, and yet many young men who have good memories win diplomas without learning to think.

Thinkers are few. The majority in and out of school is composed of people who learn as parrots do and repeat what they hear.

Recently the head of a great industry said his company had need of 200 trained research men and could not find them. Research requires thinking.

Why are thinkers so few when the art of thinking is so simple?

Probably because educators and critics tell people the importance of thinking and urge them to think instead of telling them how to think.

What is thinking?

Simply and briefly, it is the art of assembling related ideas and discovering the relation between causes and effects.

Take, for example, the proposition that a man and a woman should be free to marry and unmarry when they choose, since the mating of sexes is ordained by nature and not by law.

How shall you think that out?

Well, is there any reason why married people should not separate at will?

Yes, there are children. Somebody must care for them.

But the mother can do that, you say. As a matter of fact, she can't. Child-bearing makes her helpless. She can not fend for herself and the children if left alone.

And since child-bearing ages and breaks her, the man to whom she has given sons must care for her in return. That is common justice.

Promiscuous and temporary mating would fill the earth with helpless mothers and neglected children.

Obviously, then, legal and permanent mating is necessary for the protection of the children and the women who bear them.

But what of the wild creatures? They mate for a season or a day.

Some of them do. The cattle and dogs. If the herd protects its members and the young can find their own food, the sire can be faithless without immorality.

But wild creatures mate for life if they need a home and the young need care until they are grown.

And thus, by means of simple logic, you dovetail cause and effect to build an opinion and pick up associated ideas to prop the structure.

It is a simple game, like adding two and two, but the men who play it are masters of the earth.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

British Government to Ratify Eight-Hour Treaty, in Which Many Nations Join.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Judging from recent news dispatches, the most significant pronouncement, viewed from labor's interests, that has been made in recent years is the one of Sir Humbert Wolfe, British government delegate to the international labor conference, that his government would proceed to ratify the convention, adopted at the labor conference at Washington in 1919, calling upon member countries of the international labor organization to legalize the eight-hour day and 48-hour week in industry. Britain's proposed ratification of this convention is significant in that her action now paves the way for almost simultaneous ratification by Austria, France, Italy and Spain, which countries had already ratified the convention conditionally upon similar action being taken by neighboring states. In addition, it is practically certain that Germany and The Netherlands will follow suit, ratifying bills having already been prepared for introduction into the legislative branches of those countries.

Belgium, Czechoslovakia and India are among the most important of the ten industrial countries which have already unconditionally ratified the Washington hours convention, while conditional ratification has been made by five other countries; also, the ministers of labor of seven additional states have recommended favorable action by their respective parliaments.

As I see it, when Great Britain ratifies the hours convention the labor treaty—for such it is—will become operative, either immediately or in the near future, in practically all of the industrially important states of the world, exclusive, of course, of the United States, which is not a subscribing member.

Universal application of the eight-hour day and 48-hour week—not by custom; by legislative fact—is certainly a good political gift to the rank and file of those who toil.

Physician Is Pessimistic Over Lengthening Life; Search for Elixir Doomed, But Hope for Gradual Increase Justified.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems to me that the physicians of America are rather pessimistic about the chances of lengthening the span of life. At the meeting of the American Medical Association in Portland, Oreg., Dr. Morris Fishbein, secretary of the association, spoke of the quest for an elixir which would extend the life span, and said that despite all the advance of knowledge and the improvement in facilities for experimentation we are no nearer the coveted prize than man's earliest ancestors.

It is not easy to understand why a medical man should speak in this vein. The average life expectance of every child born in the United States is more than 55 years. One by one the plagues of mankind are being checked by science. It is true that accidents are increasing, but humanity is not yet accustomed to the machine age. There is hope that this source of death may also be reduced in the future. The span of life is considerably longer than it was a few years ago. Even men who have lived such vigorous lives as John D. Rockefeller and Thomas A. Edison are able to live into their late eighties and nineties, and perhaps longer.

Few people have placed any credence in the schemes designed to prolong life indefinitely. If such an elixir were found it would hopelessly complicate the problem of population and doubtless add to the unhappiness in the world. But there does seem justification for hope that life will be constantly lengthened for the average individual, and that is all that can be expected.

Writer Defends Modern Generation of Women; Shows Decrease in Women Criminals in New York.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I have a brief space in your column for a defense of the modern girl? No one has suffered so much from public slander as the cigarette-smoking, gin-drinking, half-clad, dieting species known as the modern girl. Every one is deploring something that she does. She is supposed to be "wild," whatever that means; to be immodest, because she dresses comfortably, and to have criminal tendencies because she indulges in some of the personal freedom which men have long approved for themselves.

The thing that I wish to call to the attention of your readers is the report of the Department of Correction for New York. The report shows that the number of women who violate the law are on the decline, while the number of men who are arrested steadily increases. Out of a total of 3,872 prisoners received in the penal institutions of New York in 1910, 740 were women. In 1928 the total number received had increased to 5,126, of whom only 622 were women. Last year the percentage was even smaller. People who are so concerned about the "future mothers of the race" must at least concede that in the largest city of the country crime is decreasing among women in spite of a general increase.

Just Like the Government.

Los Angeles Times: It is now the policy of the Government to acquire and own as many of its embassy buildings in the world's capitals as possible, but it is odd to note that the first structure actually built by Uncle Sam for diplomatic use is in the little city of Tirana, in Albania, a dinky country on the coast of the Adriatic with an area a little greater than the State of Maryland and a population a little less than the city of Baltimore. And Tirana, the capital, hives only about 12,000 souls.

Always.

Hollander Weds Miss de Graeff In Distant Java

Former Dutch Envoy's Daughter Sends Belated Invitations.

By JEAN ELIOT.

INVITATIONS for the marriage of Miss Anna Marianne de Graeff and Mr. Paul Gleichman reached Washington from far-off Java yesterday—just as the wedding was taking place. And the recipients are still puzzling over them, for they are written in Dutch.

This, of course, is natural enough, for Miss de Graeff, who was known affectionately here as "Annemie," is the daughter of Jonkheer A. C. D. de Graeff, who was Minister of the Netherlands to the United States and who is now governor general of the Dutch East Indies.

The cards are engraved in the European fashion, with the name of the bride's parents, "Jonkheer Mr. de Graeff, Gouverneur General van Nederlandsch-Indie, en Mevrouw de Graeff geboren van der Wyck" on one leaf and on the other the name of "Heer P. Gleichman's mother, "Mevrouw del Weduwa T. Th. Gleichman, geboren Heldring" on the other.

Close study of the quaint phraseology reveals the fact that "Jonkvrouwe A. M. de Graeff" and Herr Gleichman were married in the Protestant Church at Buitenzorg, Java, yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock, with a reception at 11:30 o'clock at the Governor General's beautiful palace at Buitenzorg.

The engagement of Miss de Graeff and Mr. Gleichman was announced after the de Graeffs had gone out to Java, and Washington knows him not at all. He is in business in Batavia with a firm that has headquarters in Amsterdam; and Miss de Graeff wrote to friends here that she expected to stay in the East Indies until next winter, when Mr. Gleichman would have a year's leave and they would go to Europe.

Girls in Washington Made Many Friends.

When Jonkheer de Graeff was made Governor General of the Dutch East Indies it was like going home to him. He had spent 22 years in the islands and all his children had been born there. There are four girls and one son, a youngster who was known as "Jappy" when they were in Washington. The eldest daughter has been long married to a Dutch army officer and was not with her family here, but the other three girls, Constance, Annemie and Hermione, have many friends in Washington.

They are girls who have been brought up in a most sane and careful way. Constance was her father's secretary at the time they were in Washington, and is carrying on the same work in Java. Annemie was the housekeeper, with one eye on the linen room and another on the commissary. And together they tutored their younger sister, Hermione, who is now completing her education in Holland. Moreover, both girls were expert needlewomen; and when their cousin, Miss Blanche Rousset, was married to Dr. Frantizek Chvalkovsky, sometime Minister of Czechoslovakia to the United States, they made all of the exquisite lingerie which was included in her trousseau.

The marriage of Miss Rousset and Mr. Chvalkovsky took place in Europe after he had been detached from his post in Washington. He went to the foreign office in Prague for a time, but is now serving as Minister to Germany. The Chvalkovskys have one small daughter, who is named for Mme. de Graeff.

Mexican Life To Be Studied By Miss Pitney

Supreme Court Justice's Daughters to Attend Conference.

Miss Beatrice Pitney, who is assistant director of the Department of International Cooperation to Prevent War of the National League of Women Voters, is among those who will attend the fourth seminar in Mexico City, which is conducted annually under the direction of the committee on cultural relations with Latin America. The first session will open next Sunday, and will extend through three weeks.

The purpose of the seminar is to enable a selected group of citizens from all sections of the United States to gain a first-hand and accurate knowledge of the main lines of Mexican life and development. The mornings will be given over to general conference periods with addresses by members of the Mexican government, professors, economists, bankers, experts on oil, agrarian questions, the church and labor. Afternoons will be reserved for round-table groups and the evenings devoted to several series of lectures on such subjects as the diplomatic relations between Mexico and the United States, the history of Mexico, and the economic relations between Mexico and the United States.

Miss Pitney, who is the daughter of the late Justice Mahlon Pitney of the Supreme Court, is following an interesting career with international relations as the keynote. Ever since she was graduated from Bryn Mawr College in 1927, where she specialized in economics, political science, and problems of foreign policy, she has been a constant student of foreign affairs. She attended the Geneva School of International Studies in the summer of 1927, and before returning to this country visited the capitals of Western Europe for first-hand knowledge of political and international situations.

In June, 1928, Miss Pitney joined the league's international department, of which Miss Ruth Morgan, of New York City, is chairman. Despite her youth, Miss Pitney has evinced an amazing grasp of the many problems involved in the whole question of international relations.

Within this year she has written six pamphlets for the league on the "Problem of the Philippines," "The Foreign Policy of the United States," "The Multilateral Treaty Pact," "Pan-American Treaties of 1929," "The Problem of Disarmament," and "The Root Formula and the World Court."

Miss Pitney has lived the greater part of her life in Washington. She was introduced to society here in the winter of 1922-23, after she had been graduated from Westover and studied in Paris for a year.

She divides her time between Washington and New York, but her mother, Mrs. Mahlon Pitney, makes her home here.

The Undersecretary of the Treasury, Mr. Ogden L. Mills, will join Mrs. Mills in New York Saturday and they will go to their place in Newport for a short stay.

Dr. and Mrs. Coville Return From Orient.

Dr. and Mrs. Frederick V. Coville have returned from a several months' trip in the Orient. While in the East they visited their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Cabot Coville, and made the acquaintance of the latter's small son, about a year old. Mr. Coville is attached to the American Embassy in Tokyo. Mrs. Coville was formerly Miss Lillian Grosevenor.

After a three months' stay in Europe, Miss Frances Hampson slipped into town toward the end of June, but so quietly that her friends are just beginning to discover she is home. She had been visiting Mrs. Dorsey Richardson in Paris.

Mrs. Richardson returned to this country with Miss Hampson, but only for a flying visit, spent with her family in Danville, Ill. She sailed yesterday for home, after a few days in New York, and was accompanied by her sister, Mrs. William Houghteling, of San Francisco, who will remain abroad until autumn. Mrs. Houghteling was Miss Virginia Le Seure and Mrs. Richardson was Miss Helen Le Seure. They are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest X. Le Seure, of Danville, granddaughters of the late Representative Joseph G. First Pennsylvania Rail-Air passengers Lindbergh pilots the first plane!—July 8th. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh is Consulting Aeronautical Engineer to the Pennsylvania Railroad and Chairman of the Technical Committee of the Transcontinental Air Transport, Incorporated.

Aboard The Airway Limited of the Pennsylvania

Bon Voyage!—These passengers are off on the initial westbound journey in the first 48 hour Coast to Coast Service. Their trip will be accomplished in comfort. The Airway Limited is equipped with every luxury befitting a Leader of the largest fleet of trains in America . . . The planes, too, in this service are luxuriously furnished.

"ALL ABOARD!"

. . . From its narrow dock in the Pennsylvania Station—the newly christened The Airway Limited rolls, majestic, into motion. Its gleaming sides are Tuscan red—its long, smooth grace is prophetic of speed, as it gathers momentum.

From the Observation platform—flower-banked—the fortunate passengers wave. They are off on the initial history-making flight!

All across the continent—3,000 miles—the way is prepared before them. The Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc.—with which the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Santa Fe Railway have associated themselves in offering this new service—has engaged in the most searching investigation and preparation.

Extensive air ports have been built—also emergency landing fields at regular intervals along the carefully prepared routes. Planes have been tested—veteran pilots specially trained. A private meteorological system has been worked out—and an elaborate twin system of communications so that planes in flight constantly receive the latest weather reports.

In short, everything possible has been done to make this new service measure up to the highest standards of safety, speed, and comfort—such as mark the daily operations of the "largest fleet of trains in America."

Well Known Trials to Be Heard on Air

Historic Case of Socrates to Open Series Tonight From WRC; "Ghost Hour" to Test Mental Telepathy by Auditors.

Grinding static bounced off the boards last night all except local stations. Electrical discharges were almost continuous.

Famous trials of history, whose outcome swayed the destiny of nations, will be reenacted for radio listeners in a series of broadcasts, "Historic Trials," over WRC at 8:30 o'clock. The series opens with the trial of Socrates, father of western thought and teacher of Plato, who was condemned to drink the fatal cup of hemlock for his blasphemy in daring to challenge the existence of the pagan gods.

The new series is the work of Edward Hale Bierstadt, author and editor of "Curious Trials and Criminal Cases." He is already known to radio listeners as the author of dramatic episodes in the radio series, "The Empire Builders."

Following an idea pioneered by the Australian broadcasters, an effort to determine whether there is such a thing as mental telepathy and thought transference through radio broadcasting is an experiment planned by the National Broadcasting Company through Stations WJZ, KDKA and others at 7:30 o'clock this evening.

Dunninger, considered a leading exponent of psychical research in America, will conduct the experiment. The procedure for the test, as outlined by Dunninger, is not complicated. After a brief introductory address the psychicist will request his listeners to relax, clear their minds of other thoughts and sit with pencil and pad available. Then, at a given signal, he will concentrate on one thought. A minute later he will concentrate on another thought, and the third and last thought will follow at another minute interval. The three things he thinks of will be written down and sealed in an envelope before the broadcast. Radio listeners who cooperate in the test will be requested to note the three thoughts they receive during the three-minute period of attempted transference and to mail them to the NBC.

Moya's "Song of Songs" will be sung by James Melton, tenor, during the broadcast by the Selberling Singers at 8 o'clock. The Singing Violins will be called upon for "At an Old Trysting Place," from "Woodland Sketches," by MacDowell.

Erva Giles, soprano; Richard Maxwell, tenor; and Mildred Hunt, contralto, are among the entertainers listed for the National Broadcasting and Concert Bureau hour.

The Slumber Music selections are: Overture to "Alphonso and Estrella," Schubert; selection from "The Land of Joy," Valverde; suite, "A Day in May," Frim; "Piuie d'Or," Waldteufel; "Intermezzo Elegant," from "Tales of Hoffman," Offenbach; and "For Three," Vannah.

Capt. Taylor Branson will conduct the United States Marine Band in a half-hour program from WMAL at 7:30 o'clock.

"The Vanishing Phantom of Leavenworth," a tale of crooks, detectives and hairbreadth escapes, will provide thrills in the next broadcast that True Detective Mysteries will present at 8 o'clock from WMAL.

Selections from opera will be featured in the program the Voice of Columbia is offering at 9 o'clock. The first of these will be an aria from Mozart's "Don Giovanni," to be sung by soprano and barytone, with orchestra, and this will be followed by the minuet and gavotte from Leoncavallo's "Pagliacci" and an aria from Bizet's "Le Roi d'Ys." Other numbers will include Weber's "Invitation to the Dance," "Schubert's "Erl King" and Massenet's "Vision Fugitive."

Intimate Wardrobe Items

MODERN lingerie is a lovely thing; we might almost say a lyrical one. One thing must not be assumed, however, in the search for underthings, and that is perfection of cut and fit. Wisdom has taught us that lingerie worthy to bear the name must be more than a rhapsody in chiffons and laces. It must be of a cut and design that faithfully follow the lines of the mode—and never was this more important than at the moment.

The nightgown at the top in the illustration shows that a well-cut yoke is not hard to bear. It depends alone upon the precision of its cut and the clarity of its madonna-blue triple voile for distinction. The simple bedjacket to match forms a charming ensemble.

Illustrative of the chic of lingerie that follows the mode is the backless chemise in the sketch. This would form the perfect foundation for the sheath-like evening gown with low decolletage that defies the best traditions of lingerie. No edges of lace can possibly make their appearance above the back neckline—or perhaps, more accurately, waistline—and the circular cut of the pantie part does not permit any ungainly bunching under the most suavely bound hipline.

Mules, this season, take on the most fanciful guises. East and West meet in the one at the right in the illustration, which has an Oriental turn to its toe. Canary-yellow kid is piped with black patent leather. The other one bespeaks the chic of Paris. It is fashioned of pastel rose and peach crepe de chine and ornamented with gold kid scallops.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

JULY 11.
"CANCER."

IF July 11 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 a. m. to 11 a. m., from 2 p. m. to 3 p. m., and from 7 p. m. to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 11 a. m. to 12:45 p. m., and from 4 p. m. to 5:50 p. m.

Kindly words and gracious deeds thrown upon what you consider to be hard and unprofitable soil on this date will prove to be productive seeds, and you will live to reap a golden sheaf from them. It will be a good time to make new suggestions and to plant new ideas.

Children born July 11 will have to be taught punctuality, as they will be inclined to be dawdlers with little respect for time. They will be good-natured, easy-going, and rather irresponsible, but loyal, unaffected and sincere.

You are not lacking in ability, you are a deep thinker, and a logical reasoner but your personality is one which needs forcing. The integrity or strength of your character can not be criticized, but your personality is not one which remains on the mind—you neither strongly attract or repel others on a grand scale. There are no sharp edges or glaring headlines in your make-up to advertise your presence or activities. In contrast to those born on July 10, you are an introvert—you are shy, retiring and scholarly, but not a person of dynamic action. You are reliable, very steady in a crisis, and one who can be trusted.

Your staying powers, your level headedness, and your good mind place you however, as a leader, and not as a follower, in your work. You may not seek recognition, nor receive it as quickly as those who possess more spectacular personalities, but it will come, and your successes will be permanent. You are far sighted and patient—you build step by step, and your structures will last.

You are rather a naturalist, and you not only love birds, trees and flowers but their study is one of your hobbies and you are a fighter for their conservation and preservation. You seek not to be ministered unto, but to minister happiness to others.

Successful people born July 11:
John H. Hewitt, poet.
Susan Warner, novelist.
Austin Corbin, railroad president.
John Wanamaker, merchant of Philadelphia.
Edward J. Phelps, diplomat.

TODAY'S WOMEN

By EARL MINDERMAN

JULY 11.

KATE SANBORN, the famous American author and lecturer who died in 1917, was born this day, 1839. For 20 years she lectured in cities all over the United States on literary topics.

In addition she published "Home Pictures of the English Poets," "Round Table Series of Literature Lessons," "Vanity and Insanity of Genius," "Adopting an Abandoned Farm," "The Wit of Women" and "Hunting Indians in a Taxicab."

Next to "Uncle Tom's Cabin," the best selling novel in America in the fifties was "The Wide, Wide World" by Susan Warner, born this day, 1819. The popular success was her first attempt in literature. It not only was a success in America but in Europe also. It still finds many readers. Her other novels include "Queechy," "The Hills of Shattmu," "The Old Helmet" and "Melbourne House."

Laura Nelson Hull, the actress, was born this day, 1876.

Gen. Gouraud, of France, To Arrive Here Tonight

Gen. Henri J. E. Gouraud, French World War hero and military governor of Paris, will arrive in Washington early tonight from New York, accompanied by Gen. Henry J. Reilly, of the Capital; Col. William P. Screws, of Baltimore, and other members of a welcoming committee. He arrived in New York last night and intends to visit Baltimore for the eleventh annual reunion of the Rainbow Division, World War veterans, on Saturday.

Gen. Gouraud will remain in Washington until Saturday afternoon.

Maj. Gen. Lejeune Returns.

Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, of the United States Marine Corps, arrived in Washington yesterday after an inspection tour that took him to the West Coast. He expects to take over the superintendency of the Virginia Military Institute at the beginning of the fall term.

Dare INTERPRETS the MODE

A delightful tea gown of crepe de chine, with narrow incrustations of pale blue and a matching combination. (Courtesy of the Maison Jenny, Paris).

AN interesting group of up-to-the-minute creations has been designed for a current Parisian theatrical success, "L'homme d'hier" ("The Man of Yesterday").

Mlle. Devilliers wears a charming afternoon ensemble of printed crepe de chine with a white flower motif on a red background, which is worn with a light coat of solid red kasha lined in the material of the dress. The V neckline is edged in bands of red and white, matching the belt, which is at the normal waistline. The skirt is in a petal treatment.

* * * *

A more formal frock she wears is of white crepe georgette edged in gold, which is on a strongly princess line, with a very full skirt, longer in back than in front, closely fitting bodice, and a loose kerchief effect at the U neckline.

* * * *

Mme. Charlotte Lyses wears a trim tailored ensemble of black crepe romain, in which all the jacket except the sleeves is covered with stitching. The skirt is very full but simple, and the blouse is of ivory crepe de chine, with a matching white scarf effect at the neck. A black and white silk flower completes the outfit.

Another lovely dress she wears is of pink crepe de chine, the blouse trimmed with horizontal tucks in groups of three and four. The skirt is in two volants, each gathered into pleats all around. This is on perfectly straight lines, and the neck opening is square.

* * * *

Clever Fingers knows how to make ever so many lovely things! Cute tricks for the house, novelties of painting, of carving—what's yours? Start thinking about it for the "Clever Fingers Contest."

* * * *

Would you like to know how to make a quite simply made but ever so smart summer coat, incrustations and everything? Send your stamped self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for the illustrated leaflet, which will tell you how to make it from three yards of material!

It's a Lovely Lady coat, you know, and makes an ensemble of a dress we told you how to make last week. Hurry with your envelope!

* * * *

Hast ever seen a "doublier"? Well, in view of the fact that 'twas used only in the Middle Ages on festive boards, we will forgive you if you have never seen one—and the modern tablecloths with silver threads will quite do in their stead!

* * * *

Oh-o-o-o, a tea-gown, or negligee if you prefer to so call it, of pink crepe de chine, with light blue incrustations hand-hemstitched all around, and a border made of tiny circles of pale blue rolled crepe—so fine that they look like lace!

And a sort of combination costume slip, which is worn under it or any other gown, exactly matches. Can't you see a Jenny-esque finger in this delightful set?

* * * *

Au revoir.

MISPLAYED HANDS I HAVE MET.

At Contract it would be: South one No Trump, West pass, North three No Trumps, all pass.

When the hand was played, West led the Six of Spades, dummy played the Ten, East the Queen, and South won with the King. South then led a Heart, dummy finessed the Jack; East won this trick and returned his partner's Spade. West then cashed four good Spades which, with East's Heart, saved game.

Could Declarer have avoided this catastrophe?

THE CORRECT PLAY.

With the Spade led, Declarer has a show-down for seven tricks; he can make two more Hearts if West has the King, or two more Clubs if a Club finesse succeed. If the finesse fail in one suit, he can try the other; but in the meantime the adversaries may run enough Spades to save game before Declarer takes his nine tricks.

Declarer can make one and only one Spade whether he wins the first Spade, trick or not; and by ducking he can exhaust East of Spades if West led from a five-card suit. Consequently, South should play the Trey on the Queen, holding the Deuce to make West think that East has it.

To trick 2, East would lead the Four of Spades and South would continue his deception by playing the Seven under East's Four. West now knows that South has the King (East would have led it if he had held it) and appreciates that his only entry to make his long Spades is the Spade Ace. If East has the Deuce of Spades and can take a trick in any other suit before Declarer scores game, a third Spade lead will enable West to kill South's King and cash his two remaining Spades. Therefore West ducks trick 2 and allows dummy's Jack to win.

Declarer (who knows from East's lead on trick 2 that he has no more Spades) then would finesse Clubs so that if the finesse lose, East will win; the Hearts must be finessed that way. Both finesses would lose, but Declarer would make game by winning one Spade, two Hearts, three Diamonds and three Clubs.

MANY STOCKS YIELD UNDER BEAR SELLING

Market Generally, However, Resists Pressure; New Top Records Scored.

CALL FUNDS 9 PER CENT

New York, July 10 (A.P.).—Bear pressure was again in evidence in today's stock market, but for the most part encountered strong resistance, as operations for the advance were energetically pushed forward in many sections of the list, some two dozen issues once more reaching record prices.

Bears regarded the maintenance of a 9 per cent call money rate and a cautious stand taken by several commission houses in their advices to clients, as providing a favorable background for a drive on over-bought and vulnerable issues, and a wide sprinkling of stocks was depressed 2 to 6 points at the close.

The understone in call money was easier, however. There was little calling of loans, and Federal funds, which were eagerly sought by banks yesterday to reduce their Federal Reserve borrowings, were in scant demand today. Bankers still predicted better credit conditions shortly.

Steel Tonnage Declines.

The day's news included the United States Steel unfilled tonnage report as of June 29, showing a decline of only 42,057 tons from the end of May. Although Wall street had looked for practically no change, this decrease was small enough to be regarded as highly favorable in view of the high rate of production and shipments maintained during the month.

The weekly steel trade reviews once more described the industry in glowing terms, Iron Age stating, "Fresh accumulation of steel orders and specifications since the opening of the third quarter give renewed assurance that the steel industry will operate through July and possibly even August at close to maximum capacity."

It was pointed out that on top of the record production of the first half of the year, the vitality of the current demand is the more surprising.

High Rate of Activity Shown.

A statistical indication of the high rate of industrial activity in the six months ended June 30, was pointed by the American Railway Association's report of total freight car loadings, which set a new high record of 25,596,938 cars during the half year, exceeding the best previous record for the period, made in 1927, by 75,898 cars.

Selling was particularly effective against radio, aided by rumors that the second quarter earnings report will be disappointing. The stock dropped 5 points to 77½, and closed at 78¾. American Telephone after selling up 1½ points to a record price at 242¼, slipped back 5 from the top. Allied Chemical, Bendix Aviation, Chrysler, Columbian Carbon, Du Pont, Goodyear, Simmons, Westinghouse Electric and Western Union were among issues losing 2 or 3 points. General Electric dropped more than 7 points, but reduced its loss to about 2 at the close. Commercial Solvents dropped 6 points.

Auburn Auto was again erratic, shooting up nearly 28 points, then falling back about 10 from the top, having more than regained yesterday's loss of 12 points. Case Threshing also regained yesterday's loss with a spurt of 14 points. Utilities, which had been checked by profit taking for several sessions after their June rise, again moved forward. Brooklyn Union Gas selling up about 14 points to a new peak, and Consolidated Gas breaking new high ground with a rise of about 5, influenced by rumor that the latter would soon move to acquire the former.

U. S. Steel Closes Steady.

U. S. Steel, after sagging more than a point, closed steady on the partial tonnage report, and several of the independents made substantial headway. Midland Steel Products preferred mounting about 11 points to a record price at 279, aided by reports of important new contracts to supply automotive parts, and American Rolling Mill selling up 9 points to a record price. Youngstown, Republic and Granite City also sold at record levels. A little profit taking cropped out in the rails, but Big Four jumped 10 points to a record price in a small turnover.

Air Reduction, Butler Hammer, National Biscuit, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, and Yale & Towne advanced 5 to 10 points to record prices.

The commodities were irregular. Grains turned upward again, wheat gaining a cent and more a bushel on good export demand and bullish weather reports, and corn making moderate gains. Cotton, however, was depressed 30 to 85 cents a bale by realizing and bearish weather forecasts. Raw sugar futures eased in dull trading.

In the foreign exchanges, sterling ran into some profit taking on its recent advance, the cable rate sagging ¼ a cent to $4.85½. The Japanese yen, however, jumped a full cent to 45.25 cents, more than regaining yesterday's loss of about ½ a cent. The Canadian dollar continued to improve, reaching 99.32 cents, a rise of more than 1-5 of a cent since last week.

CONVERTIBLE BONDS DIP IN PROFIT TAKING

Many Other Active Issues Yield After Touching New High Levels.

FEW FOREIGNS STRONG

New York, July 10 (A.P.).—Late profit taking in stocks brought about a pronounced reaction in convertible bonds today and most of the active issues several of which had touched new highs earlier in the session, showed net losses at the close.

An exception to the general trend of the stock feature bonds was the Atchison 4½ which gained more than 3 points on a large turnover, closing at 140¾, after selling at the new peak of 141½. American Telephone 4½s made a new top of 162¾ around midday, but the final quotation of 159¾ represented a net loss of 1¼. Missouri Pacific 5½s also found a new maximum of 118½ on active trading, only to close 2 points below that figure for a net fractional decline. International Telephone 4½s sagged 3 points.

Bonds without the speculative possibilities offered by the convertibles dragged all day. Canadian National Railway 4½s, Central of Georgia 5s, series C, and Florida East Coast 5s went to new lows on a fair amount of selling. The railroad group as a whole was mixed, especially the first grade issues. Atchison General 4s, Chesapeake & Ohio General 4½s, Pennsylvania Gold 5s and a few others sold higher, but Union Pacific 4s, New York Central general 3½s and Nickel Plate first 4s receded.

Industrials and utilities hovered close to yesterday's prices. International Match 5s, Lorillard 7s and Western Electric 5s met with enough selling to cause losses of ⅝ to 2¼ points, while International Paper 5s, Duquesne Light 4½s, North American Cement 6½s, Postal Telegraph 5s and New York Telephone 6s advanced nominally on better than average support. The foreign sugars were firm. Sinclair Consolidated Oil 7s moved in large volume, but price changes proved small and a fractional loss appeared at the close.

Some of the South American government issues and bonds of European municipalities were the strongest spots in the foreign list. Milan City 6½s equaled their 1929 high of 91 on a gain of nearly a point and Rome 6½s climbed ½ on a good turnover.

Heavy Demand for New Currency.

The lively demand for the new small-sized paper money, predicted Tuesday, materialized yesterday when it went into circulation at local banks as well as those over the country. While some of the banks had requested the Treasury Department for what they thought generous amounts, these were found inadequate before the day's business was over.

New money currency placed in circulation here yesterday consisted of $1, $5, $10 and $20 denominations, with a few $50 bills. The first issue included United States notes, silver certificates, gold certificates and Federal Reserve notes. Circulation of national bank notes will follow.

Railway Operating Income.

Class I railroads in May had a net railway operating income of $103,616,046, which, for that month, was at the annual rate of return of 5.81 per cent on their property investment, according to reports just filed by the carriers with the Bureau of Railway Economics and made public today. Leonard Says Braddock Is Improved

Champion Encounters Trouble Making Weight Limit.

By BENNY LEONARD
(Retired Undefeated Lightweight Champion of the World).

NEW YORK, July 9 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—I might warn my friend, Tommy Loughran, that he is going to have no lead pipe cinch when he meets James J. Braddock in the Yankee Stadium next Thursday night in a battle for the light heavyweight championship of the world. Braddock is one of the most improved fighters I have seen in a long, long time.

Jimmy is a Jersey chap, and although he has been doing some very nice boxing for several years nobody seemed to give him much of a tumble until he broke the jaw of Pete Latzo some time ago. Then the wiseacres sat up and took notice.

Not only has Jimmy some wallop, but he showed he knows how to connect with it when he cracked the chin of the one-time welterweight champion.

Braddock Seen as Foe of Schmeling if Victor.

The fact that this battle is for the light heavyweight championship is not as important as the fact that it is expected to supply one of the "dark horses" in the heavyweight class for next year. Indeed, they tell me that if Braddock scores a knockout over Loughran, this same Jersey Jimmy is likely to be put forward as the next opponent of Max Schmeling, provided, of course, the German squares himself with all the boxing commissions before time for the contest rolls around.

Naturally, if Max has to go through with other fights, then the Braddock-Loughran winner would have to wait until after them.

The clever Philadelphian is not having any too easy a time in making the weight, despite the reports from Hoosick Falls, N. Y., where he is training for the battle. Loughran is growing heavier gracefully. He is not yet turned 29 years of age, and has lived a clean, healthy life. Loughran, however, knows what he is capable of doing, for he has had plenty of experience in conditioning himself, and therefore I fully expect that he will be at the weight when he steps onto the scales at 2 o'clock the day of the fight.

Sprang Into Limelight by Knocking Out Griffiths.

Braddock's fight with Latzo focused attention on him, and then he was matched with Tuffy Griffiths. They heralded Griffiths as a world beater, but Jimmy sprang a surprise by tapping Tuffy on the chin and knocking him out in just two rounds.

This fight "made" Braddock. Not only did it give him a prestige with the fight fans, but the adulation of his friends and acquaintances had the effect of bringing home to James J. that he was not exactly a nonentity. However, Braddock has nothing even remotely suggesting a swelled head. But he has an assurance and a self-control that comes only with success.

Realizing that he is a good fighter, with the confidence that such realization brings, Braddock will fight better and better from now on. So that's why I say that Loughran will have his work cut out for him when he faces the New Jersey man in the ring at the Yank Stadium.

Walker-Lomski Bout Postponed to Aug. 19

Philadelphia, July 10 (A.P.).—Postponement until August 19 of the bout between Mickey Walker, world's middleweight champion, and Leo Lomski, Aberdeen, Wash., originally scheduled for July 29 in the Municipal Stadium, was announced today by the promoter, Joseph Kennedy.

The postponement was at the request of Walker, who said that he had been unable to go into training as soon as he had planned.

Free Hitting Blamed on Banning of Trick Deliveries.

By BRIAN BELL,
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

JOE M'CARTHY

NEW YORK, July 10 (A.P.).—The so-called lively ball of baseball has at least one stanch defender in Joe McCarthy.

"The only trouble I find with the ball is that it is not lively enough," said the manager of the Chicago Cubs today. "They can't make one too lively for us."

"It is not the ball," he added, "but the restriction on pitching that is responsible for the increased hitting. If they will let the pitchers discolor the ball, rub it with emery, spit on it and do the other tricks common in the old days, the hitting will stop, lively ball or no lively ball.

"Nowadays the pitchers pitch a new ball to almost every batter. If a ball seems to sail, the batter calls the umpire's attention to it, and he throws in a new one.

Hartnett's Absence Cost Club Big Lead, Is Belief.

"I like to see the boys hit the ball. So does the public. It is hitting that has placed us up in the race and I hope that hitting will keep us there.

"Naturally I believe that we will win, but it will not be easy. We will have to hustle. However, I have a whole lot of faith in our team.

"The loss of Hartnett has been a terrible blow to us. The catcher is the main cog of the machine. He handles the ball more than any other player, and with a star like Gabby out, we have been handicapped. Good as is Mike Gonzales, I believe if Hartnett could have been in there right along we would be way out in front.

"We can't tell what will happen to his arm. Maybe it will get all right overnight. We all hope so. We have sent him everywhere, to all the doctors and bone-setters we knew about.

"Our pitching is pretty good now, and most of the time we are hitting. At that we got only five hits yesterday from Cantwell, at Boston, and Seibold gave us just five hits, too. I guess they were not pitching the lively ball."

Manager McCarthy can give no first-hand testimony on the Wilson-Donohue encounter in a Chicago railway station, now under investigation by President

Almost the Naked Truth

By JAMES S. COLLINS

NEW YORK, July 10.—If William Wrigley, owner of the Chicago Cubs, really did say he was prepared to pay any price asked for Lindstrom, of the Giants, or Frisch, of the Cardinals, this year's prize for creating through one's headgear goes to him wkithout question. In the hope of finishing second, this department hereby offers President Hoover $20,000,000 for the White House; Col. Charles A. Lindbergh to play the lead in a talking movie version of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," and Al Smith $35,000,000 to join the Republican party.

It probably would take half an hour or so to get the $59,000,000 together, but there is no more danger of these offers being accepted than there is of Mr. Wrigley's being taken up. And that danger, of course, is absolutely nil. As every baseball follower knows, there can be no deals between big league clubs after June 15 except under the waiver rule. Every baseball follower also knows that even if this were not the case, neither the Giants nor the Cardinals would dream of selling a star player to a rival pennant contender in the thick of the race.

Phils Cuff Dope Bucket About With Middlin' Good Team.

Despite pitching as futile as back talk to a traffic cop, the Phillies managed to keep out of the cellar to which preseason expert dope pretty generally consigned them. In fact, the Phils are not yet out of the running for a first-division berth.

Their infield of Hurst, Thompson, Whitney and Thevenow is not the poorest in the league by a long shot. O'Doul, Klein and Sothern they have a trio, which can bust the ball right lustily as well as field acceptably. Lerian and Davis, their young catchers, are improving all the time. If Burt Shotton can hook his talons into three or four more pitchers like Benge and Willoughby, his club will make trouble for the best of them next season.

Fish in Peconic Bay Spared by Writer.

It didn't seem like a good idea at the time to the doctor, so this department was compelled regretfully to decline to join Messrs. Fred Fletcher, Jack Delaney and W. O. McGeehan, able and ardent anglers all, in an expedition designed to extract all the fish from Peconic Bay. The invitation set the time for the departure of the expedition at 3 a. m. and named weakfish and flukes as the primary objects of the quest.

Now, 3 a. m. is a good hour to write a waltz tune about, and physicians say it is chosen more often than any other by dying men to make their exits, but it strikes this department as a poor time to start out for anywhere except home. Furthermore, this department feels inclined to balk at having any truck with fish with such ignominious names as "weakfish" and "flukes." We don't want to pick on any weaklings and we don't want anything fluky about our piscatorial achievements.

Chairman Fletcher, pointing out that there is nothing weak about weakfish except their name, announces that hereafter he will refer to them as sea trout, and that he hopes in time to think up a more dignified name for flukes.

Yale Extends Monopoly in Pole Vault Stars.

Yale, which has made pole-vaulting history over a long stretch of years with such stellar performers as Standay, Carr, Gilbert, Nelson, Dray and others, bids fair to keep in the forefront in this event. In the Harvard dual meet Bill Cone cleared the bar at 13 feet. Cone, who is a sophomore and inexperienced, promises to develop into a champion in two years. Not so many years ago 12 feet was generally regarded as about the limit of human vaulting ability. Improvement in form has enabled dozens of vaulters to better that mark and two of them, Carr and Sturday, to enter the 14-foot class.

Macks, Browns Divide; Ehmke Allows Two Hits

St. Louis, Mo., July 10 (A.P.).—The Browns and the league-leading Philadelphia Athletics divided a double-header here today, the Athletics taking the opener 4 to 1 and the Browns winning the final, 7 to 5.

Heine Manush, Brownie left fielder, hit in both games, running the total of consecutive games in which he has hit safely to 18. The other was a pitching duel between Sam Gray of the Browns and Ehmke. Neither team scored until the ninth when the Athletics reached Gray for four runs. Ehmke held the Browns to two hits.

The Browns batted Rube Walberg from the mound in the third inning of the nightcap. Ed Rommel took up the hurling duties but was no more effective.

Maj. Van Vliet Trails Young Net Foe

Second Upset in D. C. Event Finds Charest Leading Kurland.

RAIN held off just long enough yesterday afternoon to permit players and fans alike to "get all het up" over a couple quarter-finals singles matches in the District tennis championships at Edgemoor Club. Then the old wet blanket spread itself for the night, shooing away everybody with the players engaged in their respective second sets.

Maj. Robert C. Van Vliet, the defending champion, was a set down and tied 1-all in games, the second set of his match with the young Navy Leech Cup star, Ensign Bill Howard, while Clarence Charest, the one-armed veteran and former District champion, held an advantage of the same proportions over Louis Kurland, the southpaw Baltimore champion. The largest gallery to date, which gathered in anticipation of a lengthy program filled with fine tennis, saw their entertainment wiped out when it was at its height.

The above-mentioned players will complete their matches this afternoon, starting at 3:30 o'clock barring further interruption by the weather, and immediately following these bruises Tom Mangan, 1928 runner-up and former title holder, will meet Dooley Mitchell, while Bob Considine, public parks champion, engages Ensign J. K. McCue, Navy Leech Cup player and the most prominent "dark horse."

Doubles Quarter-Finals Scheduled Today.

In addition, today's card will call for the completion of the quarter-finals doubles encounter betwen the teams of Larry Phillips and Deane Judd and Lieut. S. K. Robinson and Maj. W. M. Robertson. This match was halted Tuesday by rain, with Robinson and Robertson leading, 3—2, in games in the first set.

Ensign Howard gave the dope and the experts somewhat of a jolt by taking the first set from Van Vliet yesterday. Few of the close observers had admitted previously that Howard's chances of taking the steady-playing champion were good, but he made them admit that much when he ran up a lead of 5—2 in games and then finally pulled out a winner, 8—6, despite a temporary slump.

Howard's hard overhead accounted for most of his points, though at one stage it prevented his running out the set at 6—3. He smashed one of Val Vliet's high lobs out of bounds with set point at hand.

Howard at Set Point Six Times.

Howard reached set point six times before finally lobbing over Van Vliet's head for the winning point in the 14th game. Van Vliet showed rare courage and coolness under fire by pulling himself up to a tie at 6—6. Howard captured the 13th game, which was deuced five times, by smashing a return of an easy lob from the net.

Charest's beautiful driving and accurate placements were the chief factors in his gaining a 9—7 set from Kurland. The veteran broke through after a deadlock at 6—6 in games with a shot to the sideline, but Kurland came back to take the next game and tie it up again. Once more Charest won on his opponent's service and then scored on his own to take the set.

Cubs Defeat Giants, 6-3; Bush Stars on Mound

New York, July 10 (A.P.).—The cubs captured the first decision in their five-game series with the Giants here today, 6 to 2.

It was Pitcher Guy Bush's eleventh victory out of twelve games this season.

The Cubs scored their first three runs off Hubbell, errors aiding in two of them. Hubbell was retired for a pinch hitter, and the Cubs continued to score on Judd and Henry, his successors. Cuyler was a big factor with two singles, a base on balls, a sacrifice fly, two steals, one run scored and two runs batted in.

MOE REACHES QUARTER FINALS

Youth Under Par Despite Handicaps in Western Golf.

MISSION HILLS COUNTRY CLUB, Kansas City, Mo., July 10 (A.P.).—Don Moe, handsome, meticulous 19-year-old University of Georgia student, from the Alderwood Country Club at Portland, plays par golf despite handicaps. He entered the quarter finals of the thirtieth annual Western amateur tournament under way on the Mission Hills course this afternoon after shooting one under par on the 28 holes he had to play in his first and second round matches, although obliged to battle rain, heavy fairways and treacherous greens.

As though this were not enough in the way of impediments he had to overcome the mental hazard of a brown dog that insisted upon standing in front of him when he drove. The dog was a faithful gallery member at the finish.

Moe had conquered the course with two par 72 rounds for medalist honors in the qualifying rounds.

Sweet Defeats Carter In Major Upset.

The major upset of the tournament came in a second round match when Art Sweet, golf writer from Chicago, defeated a former champion, Keefe Carter, Oklahoma City, 4 and 2, after Carter had eliminated the sweet shooting Chester Jones, University of Kansas student, 4 to 3, in a morning round. Sweet won his morning round from James A. Kennedy, of Tulsa, Okla., 2 up.

In his morning round Moe won from W. S. Critchlow, Ardmore, Okla., 6 and 5, and in so doing turned in the lowest nine-hole score of the tournament, a 32 on the first nine on which par is 35.

Middlewestern golfers predominate in the quarter final pairings tomorrow with Moe the only "outsider" and incidentally the favorite of the gallery. Moe is paired with another young man, Carey L. Ballew, jr., 20-year-old Kansas City boy, for the gruelling 36-hole battle, which will truly test the merits of a golfer.

Kid Chocolate Defeats Fernandez at Brooklyn

New York, July 10 (A.P.).—Kid Chocolate, speedy Cuban boxer, added one more victory to his long string tonight by defeating Ignacio Fernandez, of the Philippines, in his first important battle as a featherweight. Chocolate had the best of the ten-round battle, which opened the outdoor season at Ebbets Field, by a good margin, although he found the going hard in spots. Fernandez weighed 125; Chocolate 123.

Fernandez staged several strong rallies which gave Chocolate trouble in the early rounds, but as the fight progressed the flashy Cuban negro displayed his superiority all around. On several occasions he drew blood from the brown boy's nose, although he could not floor him.

9 HOME RUNS HIT AS BUCS BEAT PHILS

5 for Pirates and 4 for Phils Come Within One of Record.

PHILADELPHIA, July 10 (A.P.).—A home run barrage, laid down by the Pittsburgh Pirates wrecked the Phillies today under a 15 to 9 count.

Five circuit clouts by the league leaders were all made at opportune moments, with Grantham leading the attack with two.

The Phillies also were in a hitting mood and slammed out four homers to make the afternoon a complete success for the lovers of slugging.

The clubs came within one homer of the major league record total for both clubs in a game, but neither team threatened the record for one club, which is seven. The previous mark of ten by two clubs was set in the same park seven years ago when the Phillies hit six homers and the Cardinals four. The highest total ever made by one team in a game is seven, shared by three National League teams and one American contender.

Choices Fail In Six Races On Card

By ORLO L. ROBERTSON
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

NEW YORK, July 10 (A.P.).—The form players are just about ready to throw in the towel at Arlington Park.

For the third consecutive day today they were forced to waive their wisest selections and heavily backed "tips" go down to defeat on a card in which only one public choice won. Six times the long shots dashed across the finish line the winner, while a scattered few let loose with loud hurrahs.

The slaughter of the favorites started in the first race, when 16-year-old Paul Neal rode Prince Atheling II to victory—a triumph that paid the backers of the 2-year-old Maiden colt $3.80 for a $2 mutuel win ticket. The R Goose colors were to the fore in the second race as Princeton led a large field of 3 year-olds over the 6-furlong route to pay his supporters $25.14 for a $2 investment.

Erin Queen, in Third, Only Favorite to Score.

The Audley Farm's 3-year-old filly, Erin Queen, broke through in the third event to give the form players their only win of the day. She paid $4.18 for a $2 ticket at the mutuel windows.

The Coldstream stud's Eskimo was the winner of the fourth—a 7-furlong sprint for 3-year-olds and up, with a value of $8,100 to the winner—and he paid $17.88 to his backers who held a $2 ticket. R. S. Clark's Clog Dance, another outsider, ran second, while Port Harlem, the favorite, was in the also-ran group.

The fifth race saw the 3-year-old Golden Prince lead the field under the wire to reward his wellwishers $9.88 for every $2 shoved across the board at the mutuel windows. E. McCown's Don Fernando came through with a $16.88 victory in the sixth, but J. Hannie's 4-year-old gelding, Honeyfish, set the record for the day when he paid $42.44 for his victory in the seventh race.

Fields Outrides McAtee to Win With Princess Tina.

With George Fields giving Princess Tina one of his best rides, the Audley Farm's 4-year-old filly, Princess Tina, scored a sensational victory in the Morrisania Handicap at Empire City. The race was over a mile and 70 yards, which Princess Tina covered in 1:43 3-5 to beat the Man o' War colt, R. L. Gerry's Ironsides, to the wire by a head, with Valkyr, another son of Man o' War, third.

The race was a stretch duel in which Fields outrode Pony McAtee, who had the mount on Ironsides.

COLLYER'S COMMENT on the SPORT of KINGS

BY BERT B. COLLYER

RADIO flash from upper Canada via our short wave length, says "Ice flows not so bad, but 'Shorty' is suffering lack of attention. The 'Owlin' Hunter expects to make port in time for today's slaughter at Windsor."

Inasmuch as "Bre'er" Annenberg did not supply us with a code, we—in our own old-fashioned way of the real top liners of present day trainers, will—interpret the "message," as "Lloyd Gentry, one of the real top liners of present day trainers will take down no less than three purses over yhme this aft.

The sweetest melon of the trio is KNIGHT COMMANDER, which was shipped to Windsor from Fairmount Park for the day's melon-cutting. Now, this is a fair sort of hide. In the closing spasm, Gentry is represented by THISTLE BEAUTY, and it is my personal opinion that she will make this band of mavericks hustle to win. You have the answer in your lily white mitt.

Out at Arlington Park, the happy chatter is CLEORA on the chin strap this aft. These Harned boys are a heap sight better than green hands, and CLEORA is a sweet, consistent mare. If you need it stronger than that, go write it yourself.

WICKER, in the opening dash, was the hottest kind of an overnight "tip."

By the same token there was also some "noise"—like real dough—for THEO ROCHESTER, a real consistent little racer. In this respect the latter is probably the best "take-a-chance bet" of the day.

LADY BUYER seems to have been dropped into a nice snug spot in the third, though DIXIE DREAMER and CHELYS may both prove troublesome. Strict attention should be paid to riders in this race.

HONEYMAN, which worked a mile in 1:40 rather handily for today's race, is taken to beat the well-balanced field named in the fourth. In this LAUNDRYMAN is almost sure to command a strong following. The same goes for SUITOR.

At Empire City, the standout horse is ZUBLENA, which will have Fator in the pilot house. With the warning tossed under his belt recently, it is an even bet that the Rancocas rider will be whoop-dee-deeing. At all events, I know commissions are planted in St. Louis. Ye'weekum.

ARMY, NAVY NAME ELIGIBLES FOR LEECH CUP TENNIS

Service Teams To Clash July 20

Navy Holds Edge With Three Victories in Five Years.

Both Teams Strengthened; Close Score Is Promised.

PLAYERS eligible to participate in the Army-Navy Leech Cup tennis match July 20 at the Chevy Chase Club were announced yesterday. The Navy has picked twelve and the Army ten. From these groups the regulars and substitutes will be named by Saturday.

The Navy list is composed of Capt. W. S. Anderson, Commander C. C. Gill, Lieut. Comdr. Vincent H. Godfrey, Lieut. R. M. Watt, jr., Lieut. R. H. Dole, Lieut. D. C. Redgrave, Ensign William Howard, Ensign J. K. McCue, Ensign C. D. Griffin, Ensign James E. Farrin, Ensign H. J. MacRoberts and Ensign R. F. Fenton.

Army's squad has Col. Walt C. Johnson, Maj. W. M. Robertson, Maj. P. C. Paschal, Maj. L. S. Hobbs, Maj. R. C. Van Vliet, Maj. T. D. Finley, Maj. J. H. Hills, Lieut. D. D. Rodekin, Lieut. J. R. Sherburne and Lieut. S. K. Robinson.

The forthcoming match will be the sixth of the series started in 1924 and Army will be out to even up the score. Navy having won the last three matches.

Local tennis fans, who have watched players of both sides in action here this season, predict that this year's struggle will be even more hotly contested than that of 1928 in which Navy gained the decision, 4 to 3, although both teams were even in sets.

Additional strength has been enlisted for each team. Navy has regained the services of Capt. Anderson and Commander Gill, who were valuable performers of a couple of seasons back. Also, Navy will have the services of a quintet of newcomers, three of whom graduated from the Naval Academy this spring. Much is expected of this group —Lieuts. Dole and Redgrave and Ensigns Farrin, MacRoberts and Fenton.

Maj. Robertson, who returned to Washington from the West last week and quickly attained an enviable position in the District tennis championships, will be available for Army again. Lieut. Robinson, partner with Robertson in the doubles of the District tourney, and rated a real comer by close observers of the game here, will be Army's lone recruit.

Thomas Stops Yankees For Second Time, 6-3

Umpires Tell Heydler Of Cubs-Reds Battles

New York, July 10 (A.P.).—President John A. Heydler, of the National League, today completed his examination of Cincinnati players in connection with the Wilson-Donohue fisticuffs in a Chicago railway station on the evening of July 4. The Cincinnati testimony was closed after Infielder Joe Stripp and Outfielder Bill Zitzmann appeared as witnesses.

President Heydler has also heard the testimony of Reardon, Jorda and Rigler, the three umpires in the Cincinnati-Chicago series.

The Chicago side of the controversy will be heard before the league executive Friday when Outfielder Hack Wilson, Pitcher Claud Jonnard and possibly other Cubs will give their sworn testimony.

Manager Joe McCarthy, of the Cubs, said on his arrival in New York from Boston today that he knew nothing of the affair. The manager had boarded an earlier train for the East and was not a witness.

"I don't know what it's all about," said McCarthy, "but any of our players who have any information on the subject, of course, will appear before President Heydler Friday."

M'CARTHY DEFENDS LIVELY BASEBALL

Heydler. All the information the Cub pilot has is hearsay.

"I was on my way to Buffalo," said McCarthy, "but I would not squawk about a fight or two.

"Of one thing I am absolutely certain. Riggs Stephenson did not intentionally hurt Hughie Critz. Stevie went into second base to break up the double play. That was baseball, and the base belonged to him. He and Hughie went down in a tumble. Critz was not spiked. His knee was hurt in the fall.

"A St. Louis player went into Rogers Hornsby, broke up the double play and knocked Rogers out into center field. Rogers took it without a grumble. It was baseball. A New York player two years ago went into Sparky Adams when he was standing 10 feet from the base watching the ball being handled in the outfield. Sparky wanted to lick him, but I told him to forget it.

"Riggs Stephenson and Hack Wilson are not roughnecks. They are clean-cut gentlemen and great players, and you won't hear them or any of the rest of our club crying, no matter where we are in the race."

Griffith to Visit Landis On Pitcher Giard Case

Because of orders from Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis calling for him to attend a hearing at Chicago Monday, President Clark Griffith was forced to postpone his proposed personal scouting trip through the South.

Griffith will appear before the diamond czar in an effort to iron out complications which have arisen in connection with the case of Pitcher Joe Giard. When Archie Campbell failed as a moundsman here he was returned to St. Paul on condition that the "Saints" would send Giard to the Atlanta Club, which the Nats thought they had bought at the time.

Giard reported to the Crackers, but, in the meantime, Washington's purchase of the Atlanta Club was called off, while Landis also refused to approve the Campbell-Giard deal, ordering Campbell's return to St. Paul to stand, but ruling that major league waivers were needed on Giard before he could be sent to another minor league club.

These waivers have since been obtained and Giard sold to the San Antonio Club of the Texas League, but Atlanta insists upon keeping the player. Several days ago the Crackers were ordered by Landis not to use Giard and his status will not be decided until after the hearing to be held at Chicago on Monday.

ALMOST THE NAKED TRUTH—BY COLLINS

Great Britain and Germany. Great Britain is almost a sure bet to reach the interzone finals, but for the first time in many years it is not a sure bet that the United States will take the British in turn and advance to the challenge round. Austin, Gregory and Collins showed enough stuff at Wimbledon to prove that they are not to be laughed off too easily. It is the first time a British team has advanced to the semifinal round since 1913. No American team has failed to reach the challenge round since 1907, when the great Brookes and Wilding, of Australia, knocked off Wright and Behr.

As far as actual possession of the Davis Cup goes, it looks as if it will make no difference whether the United States or Britain faces France in the challenge round. Either's chance of lifting the trophy seems to be little better than its chance of lifting the Louvre. Monsieurs Cochet, Lacoste and Borotra appear to have altogether too much on the ball for any opposition at this writing.

Gwynn King Defends His Singles Title.

Gwynn King, ace of the Henry Park contingent, is expected to appear in defense of his singles championship won last year, while Dooley Mitchell and Bill Buchanan, of Montrose Park, are being counted on to defend their doubles title.

As usual, the singles and doubles winners will be sent to the national public parks championships, this year listed for August 19 to 24 at Buffalo, N. Y. Their expenses will be defrayed by the Welfare and Recreational Association.

In last year's national tournament at Cleveland the three District representatives were eliminated in the round before the semifinals in their respective divisions. Considine bowed to the ultimate singles champion, George Jennings, jr., of Chicago, who won the crown held by Ted Drewes, of St. Louis, from 1924 to 1927, inclusive. Jennings and Ralph Rice combined to capture the doubles championship also for Chicago.

Pennsylvania Golf Title Won by Herron

Ardmore, Pa., July 10 (A.P.).—S. Davidson Herron, of the Oakmont Club, Pittsburgh, today won the Pennsylvania amateur golf championship by defeating Hugh Ramill, of the Merion Club, Haverford, 1 up.

Miss Hicks, in Form, Is Easy Golf Winner

Groton, Conn., July 10 (A.P.).—Miss Helen Hicks, 18-year-old golf star, from Hewlett Park, N. Y., served notice that she is an outstanding threat to capture the eleventh annual invitation tournament of the Shenecossett Country Club by overwhelming Mr. L. C. Dubois, of Ridgewood, N. J., 9 and 7, in the second round.

The favorites continued into the third round with little opposition except in the case of Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, of Merion, Pa. The former national titleholder, seeking her third Griswold Cup trophy here, was forced to the seventeenth green by Mrs. Ruth M. Reymond, of Baton Rouge, La., who finally was beaten by a score of 2 and 1.

ALEXANDRIA SPORTS

Special to The Washington Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., July 10.—The St. Mary's Celtics will have the Quantico Marines as their opponents at Beggett's Stadium Sunday afternoon in what promises to be the most interesting baseball game played here so far this season. The Marines have humbled the teams of Holy Cross, New York University and Harvard, and have won seven straight games from sand lot teams without being scored upon. It is reported that the Devil Dogs, headed by Gen. Butler, will invade the city in force, with the avowed purpose of showing the Celtics who is who in this neighborhood.

The Celtics appear not at all dismayed by the record of the Sea Soldiers, and fully expect to have the last laugh. Lefty Hamilton will probably have the mound assignment and Doc Dreifus, to judge from advance reports, will be the rest of the team, assisted by Art Ludlow, whose specialties is losing balls by hitting them into nearby counties. Art will play third and, assuming that Hamilton will pitch, Doc Dreifus may be seen in any or all the remaining positions, and may even pitch.

Lawrence Padgett's Police Department Baseball Team will play the Richmond Police Department here next Saturday, July 20, at Baggett's Stadium, arrangements having just been completed. The local cops are out to annex the police baseball title of Virginia, the District of Columbia and nearby Maryland, being nothing if not ambitious. Padgett has arranged games, or has them in prospect, with Norfolk, Baltimore and Washington, after the Richmond game.

Richmond will present Taylor and Blankenship as their mound artists, with Napier behind the bat, and Robinston as the clean-up hitter, he having hit three balls to the far distance in the recent game with Baltimore. Padgett, for the locals, has Everly, who held the local Firemen safe in their recent game, as his best pitching selection, and counts on Sims, Ludlow, Dreifus and Lee to make the Richmond pitchers' lives a burden to them.

Padgett is in correspondence with the Washington Fire Department Team for a game Saturday afternoon of this week, and expects to have definite advice shortly.

3 Arrested at Track, Despite Injunction

Cleveland, July 10 (A.P.).—In the face of an injunction restraining Sheriff E. J. Hanratty from interfering with operation of the "contribution" system of betting at the Thistledown Track, deputies late today arrested three track officials on charges of gambling. The arrests came as the first attempt was made in Cuyanoga County in the last two years to hold running horse races.

British to Send Veteran Tennis Cup Team to U.S.

New York, July 10 (A.P.).—England is sending a veteran women's tennis team to compete against the United States in the seventh annual Wightman Cup series at Forest Hills, August 9 and 10.

In the British line-up will be Mrs. Dorothy C. Shepherd-Barron, Mrs Phyllis H. Covell, Mrs. Peggy Saunders Michell, Mrs. Phoebe Watson and Betty Nuthall.

In doubles the British team will be exceptionally strong. Mrs. Watson and Mrs. Michell, Wimbledon champion, probably will form one combination and Mrs. Covell and Mrs. Shepherd-Barron, runners-up at Wimbledon, another. But in singles the United States will hold the upper hand with Helen Wills and Helen Jacobs as the principal hopes. The complete united States line-up has not been announced.

England evened the series at three-all on British soil last year. The series consists of five singles and two doubles matches.

SEEK MIDGET FOE.

The American Legion Nine of Hyattsville wishes to play a practice game Friday at 10 o'clock. Teams wishing to meet the Hyattsville lads should call Manager Holland at Hyattsville 1024.

THE DOUBLE - - By EDGAR WALLACE

Dick Staines, department inspector, happens upon mysterious intruders in the London home of wealthy Walter Derrick. One of them, a woman, amazes him by her striking resemblance to Mary Dane, a beautiful nurse, whom he has lately met at Brighton. Finger-print experts discover that the sole trace left by the intruder, who drugged Derrick's caretaker, is identical to one left by the baffling Slough murderer ten years earlier. Dick learns that old Joshua Derrick, father of Walter, had apparently left a great deal more money than had been found after his death, and he and Walter start a search for the remainder.

Later that afternoon Dick interviewed a retired builder in the Wandsworth road; an old man whose memory was a little defective but who could very well recall the circumstances of his contract with the elder Derrick. He remembered in the course of the building a long, shallow safe coming to the house, but where it was placed he had no knowledge. Mr. Derrick, as Dick suspected, had worked on the building himself, and, to the scandal of the neighborhood, had even spent his Sundays in an old suit, plying a trowel. More than this; he had stopped all the work for three months and had brought in black workmen. The older builder thought they were Moors, for the only holiday Mr. Derrick permitted himself was an occasional month in Tangier in the days when living was cheap and it was possible to reach the North Coast of Africa on a fruit boat for a few pounds.

CHAPTER V.

HIS memory, however, was not entirely reliable in regard to essentials. But he remembered one recent trifle and produced a sensation by its recital.

"It's a funny thing," quavered the old man, as he offered a limp hand at parting, "that all sorts of people want to know about that there house. I had a young lady here a day or two ago—pretty as a picture she was, a bit of a girl. She said she was writing a book about houses and wanted to know if I had any old plans. And, sure enough, up come the question of this house of Mr. Derrick's."

"What was she like?" asked Dick. "Tall or short, stout——?"

The old gentleman considered.

"Well, now you come to mention it, I don't remember anything about her except that she'd got very pretty eyes—a sort of grayish-blue, just like my granddaughter's; sort of long, dark lashes over 'em."

Dick knew that he was describing the eyes of Mary Dane, or Mary Dane's double. He thought it was a moment to make the tactful admission that he was a police officer.

"Detective, are you? Well, I can't tell you anything more than I've told you. She wanted to know where she could find the architect, and I gave her his address. She wrote it down on this very table." He pointed shakily. "She couldn't find a pencil for a bit, and then she took one out of her bag—a gold one with a big red stone at the end of it."

Dick's jaw dropped; he was describing the pencil he had lost and which Nurse Mary Dane had restored to him.

It was a sorely puzzled man who left Scotland Yard that evening and walked to his lodgings. It was 11:30, and once he had left the Strand behind him he was in a fairly deserted area till he came to Holborn. This passed, he entered the silence and desolation of Bloomsbury, and was feeling a twinge of annoyance that he had so precipitately let his flat when he found interest in one of those unpleasant little dramas which are all too frequent in a great city.

A woman was walking ahead of him, so far ahead that he could not be certain that it was a woman and not a man. As he swung along he gradually overtook her, though he was totally unconscious of the fact. Her assailant must have been coming from the opposite direction; Dick did not see him until he heard a girl's cry and saw two people struggling. He quickened his pace and came up to them as, slipping from the man's grasp, the girl turned to fly. She cannoned into the detective and almost knocked him over. In another second the man had gripped her arm. He was tremendously tall, overtopping Dick Staines; his voice was thick and drunken and very loud.

"Hey! Come back, you!"

Inspector Staines caught him with a professional grip and swung him back against the railings of the gardens that occupied the center of the square.

Then he heard a little gasp from the girl, and turning his head, found himself staring stupidly into the face of Mary Dane. She was dressed in a dark blue costume and he might not have recognized her in the closely fitting hat if he had not known her.

"Oh! Mr. Staines, please send that man away!"

The tall fellow was truculent, most anxious to take up the matter of an unprovoked appearance.

"What's the idea?" His voice was louder and even more ruinous. "Can't I talk to a young lady—old friend of mine from Cape Town?"

He waggled his finger drunkenly in the girl's face.

"Didn't think I knew yer, did yer? But Lordy's got a memory; he never forgets people who done him a bad turn—and——"

The actions of police officers are rather definite. Dick Staines again jerked the man against the railings without an effort.

"Is this fellow annoying you?"

He saw by the light of a street lamp that her face was very pale.

"No—I think he has mistaken me for somebody else."

"Like hell I have!" said the stranger. "Your name's Mary Devilliers! And who are you, I'd like to know?" He turned suddenly on Dick.

"I am Inspector Staines from Scotland Yard," said Dick, and at the words the long figure seemed to wilt. His voice sank to an ingratiating whine.

"I'm not giving any trouble, Inspector. Perhaps I've made a mistake with this young lady. To tell you the truth, I've had a couple of drinks——"

"Let's have a look at you," said Dick, gripping him by the lapel and drawing him to the light.

The first thing that struck Dick Staines was the man's extraordinarily narrow head; a long brown face, a pendulous nose, small round eyes deeply set, and a ragged little moustache were photographed in Dick's memory.

"It's all right, 'baas'—Lordy Brown is my name. I landed last Saturday from the 'Glamis Castle.' This young lady knows—well maybe she doesn't know."

Then, to Dick's surprise, he began talking rapidly in a language which the detective did not understand. At first he thought it was German, then he knew it to be Dutch, and the "taal" at that.

"I don't know what you're talking about. Do you understand that?" He turned to the watchful girl, who had withdrawn a little from the circle.

She shook her head.

"I have an idea he's trying to speak to me," she said.

"To you, miss?" said Lordy Brown almost humbly. "Why should I talk to you? I've given you enough trouble tonight. I'm a gentleman, and I apologize. Only landed from the Glamis on Saturday. I got a good friend here, Mr. Inspector. I went round to see him, but he wasn't in. Good feller, too—knew him years ago when he was living in a dirty old tent in Tanganyika. He'll see Lordy all right. Millionaire, this fellow is. Had a row with his old man and ran away to Africa, but a good feller—old Walter Derrick."

Dick looked at him quickly.

"Do you know London at all?" he asked. "Do you know——" He mentioned a cafe near Piccadilly Circus which almost every overseas tourist has visited. "Meet me there in half an hour. Where are you staying?"

The man gave a hotel in a street off the Strand and gave it so readily that Dick knew he was speaking the truth.

"I'll see you in half an hour. If you're not there I'll come and find you," said Dick Staines, and without another word left the man.

The girl was already walking slowly away. Evidently she expected his escort.

"It was all very terrifying, and I rather lost my head," she said ruefully. "I didn't see this man until he came up to me. I hate drunken people."

"Where are you staying tonight?" he asked.

She was staying at a private hotel in Gower street. She had come up for the day from Littlehampton to do some shopping and was going back the next day. She did not like London particularly, she confided to him.

"I want to ask you a question," said Dick. "Have you ever heard of somebody being so like you that you have been mistaken for each other?"

She shook her head.

"No, I don't think there's anybody in the world quite like anybody else," she said. "Have I really got a double?"

A treble, unless Mr. Lordy Brown was talking in his sleep. He mistook you for a Miss Devilliers of Capetown. Do you know Capetown?"

To his surprise she nodded.

"I was there two years ago," she said. "But you couldn't have been a nurse then: you weren't old enough."

She laughed softly at this.

"You're in a very complimentary mood tonight, Mr. Staines."

And then she shivered.

"I wish I hadn't seen that man: I'm rather worried about him."

He did not ask her why she should be worried about a man she did not know and whom she might not see again.

"It is queer that he should know Derrick," he said.

She did not answer, and when he repeated the rather banal statement:

"Mr. Derrick? He was the gentleman with the yellow motor car? Is he in London?"

At present, Dick told her, Mr Walter Derrick was at his country house in Surrey.

"He is very fortunate," she said.

He asked her why, and she smiled. When he pressed her:

"How stupid you are! And Lord Weald—Tommy, don't you call him?—thinks you're so terribly clever! Wouldn't you think it good fortune not to have to entertain an old African friend like Mr. Brown? You're going to see him, aren't you—Brown, I mean? Do ask him who Miss Devilliers is—it's rather a common name in Capetown, if I remember richly. Have you lost your pencil again?"

The question recalled to his mind a matter that troubled him.

"I almost thought I had," he said. "And this is where the question of your double comes in. There's a builder at Wandsworth named Ellington, a very old gentleman, who recently had a visitor—a lady who, from his description, was rather like you—she called on the day the pencil was lost, and on the day—something else happened that was rather remarkable. Ellington said the young lady had asked him for particulars about Mr. Walter Derrick's house and that she had produced a pencil to write down an address that was obviously my pencil. Am I being very amusing?" he added a little tartly, for she was laughing.

"I think you're terribly amusing. Look!"

She opened her bag and took out a shining gold object and handed it to him. He stopped to examine it: it was identical with the pencil he had in his pocket.

"I bought it this afternoon in Regent street," she said solemnly. "I could have bought 40 or 50 or 100. There seems to be a rogue in these pencils just now. I saw a man using one in the train. Where did you get it?"

"Tommy gave me mine," he said.

"Of course Tommy gave you yours!" she scoffed. "There's a shop in Regent street selling nothing else—a fountain pen shop. If you take the trouble to look you will see an enormous display of them in the window, and if you think they're gold they're not! I hate exposing your Tommy, but they cost seven and sixpence each, and I should think there are nearly 50,000 of them in use. Will you tell me something?"

"I'll tell you anything I can," he replied.

WARRENTON OPENS ANNUAL PONY SHOW

Competition of Young Riders Is Keen; Entries Are of High Order.

MASTER SLIPPERY TRACK

Special to The Washington Post.

Warrenton, Va., July 10.—The first day of the tenth annual Warrenton pony show was a success in every way with the exception of some showers in the afternoon, which made the going slippery. The morning was a real summer day and the turf in excellent condition.

The entries were of high order and the competition among the young riders was keen. The Sydnor family of Richmond, was not to be denied and when the last horse had answered the bugle Florence and Eugene Sydnor were in possession of two blues and two yellows. Miss Woodford and Trixie were the entries accounting for the two firsts. Mrs. Edwin Vaughan's Newsboy was an easy winner in the class for half-bred hunters. Robert Blickle, of Warrenton, annexed three first prizes and was second and third in other classes. HUGE SHIP LAUNCHED AT NEWPORT NEWS

Many Notables in Throng as $7,000,000 Craft Is Christened.

LARGEST BUILT IN U. S.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Newport News, Va., Juply 10.—Elaborately designed as the largest commercial vessel ever constructed in America, the Panama Pacific Co.'s giant liner Pennsylvania was launched at noon here today amid the tumultuous roars of a mammoth crowd that included notables.

Measuring approximately 58 feet longer from end to end than the Washington Monument's 555-foot peak, the massive $7,000,000 craft slid gracefully down the ways of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. and out into the James River, dripping with its christening prewar champagne from the hands of little Eleanor Jane McCarthy, daughter of A. J. McCarthy, the line's general manager.

Screeching sirens and horns, the clicking of countless cameras, the drone of army blimps overhead and the cheering of invited guests from every corner of the nation accorded the mammoth boat an auspicious send-off as it drifted nose-seaward in accordance with the age-old tradition presaging a glamorous destiny.

Longer Than Sister Ships.

Duplicating its sister ships, the Virginia and the California, in virtually every detail except its slightly superior length, the Pennsylvania slipped afloat with the well-wishes of Gov. Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, and P. A. S. Franklin, president of the International Mercantile Marine, parent owners of the Panama Pacific fleet, who headed the delegation of distinguished visitors. Many Pennsylvanians were in attendance, among whom were Elisha Lee, vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and others.

Construction of this 34,000-ton turbo-electric liner may justly be interpreted as marking the dawn of a new era in American shipbuilding, attesting alike the ability of American yards to produce ocean greyhounds as the peers of any in the world and also to the present race in progress for ocean maritime supremacy among American shipping interests.

Capable of 18 Knots.

Capable of 18 knots an hour the superliner on October 19 will sail from New York on its maiden voyage to join its sister ships in a thirteen-day schedule through the Panama Canal to San Francisco. It is luxuriantly outfitted, boasting two swimming pools, the most modern conveniences and cuisine, aside from its costly portraitures, murals, charts and incidental furnishings depicting events in the picturesque history of its name State. It has first-class and tourist cabin passenger accommodations for 800.

Following the ceremonies the large party proceeded to the Chamberlin-Vanderbilt Hotel at Old Point Comfort for a sumptuous dinner before the guests began returning to their homes, many planning to visit Washington en route.

Va., constituting one of the largest plantings in the section, will be sold this year through their own organization to be known as Consolidated Distributors, Inc., with J. Fred Wilson, formerly with the Cumberland Fruit Exchange, as salesman, and with offices at Paw Paw.

Movement of peaches from this section will not start in volume before August 1, it was believed today. Both yellow and red early apples are now going out in carload quantities.

COLLEGE PLANNED FOR CUMBERLAND

Junior Institution to Give High School Graduates Two-Year Course.

KOPP ADDRESSES ROTARY

Cumberland, Md., July 10.—Charles L. Kopp, county superintendent of schools, addressing the Cumberland Rotary Club yesterday, indicated that a junior college would be established in Cumberland to enable high school graduates of Allegany County to pursue at least two years of higher education at or near home. Mr. Kopp said more than 400 young men and women were graduated from the public schools of Allegany County this year and that more than 200 of them would pursue higher studies elsewhere.

Mr. Kopp announced a full-time supervisor of high schools would be employed in Allegany County next year and that great opportunity for high school education would be developed in the rural districts. The Maryland Legislature, Mr. Kopp said, recently made an appropriation for special classes for handicapped children and that arrangements were being made to take advantage of this in Allegany County by establishing classes for children who can not get along with regular classes. The State appropriation for this purpose amounts to about $2,000 in Allegany County.

James E. Spitznas, who has been principal of Beall High School in Frostburg since 1925, is to be the new high school supervisor in Allegany County. He will be succeeded as principal at Beall High by Ralph R. Webster, of Deals Island, Md., who has been principal of the Mount Savage High School.

Spitznas, who is 37, is a native of Frostburg. He graduated from Beall High in 1911 and four years later received his Ph. D. at Dickinson. Carlisle. In 1919 he received his master's degree in history after taking a post-graduate course, and the same year became instructor of United States history at Beall High. Since entering high school work, he has taken summer courses at West Virginia University, University of Chicago and five summers at Columbia University, where he received his master's degree in education.

DE PRIEST LYNCHING CHARGES ANSWERED

Colored Representative Is Challenged in Alabama Newspaper Article.

ABUSE OF FAMILY DENIED

Florence, Ala., July 10 (A.P.).—The Florence Times-News today published a series of interviews with pioneer residents of Lauderdale County, which, it contends, refuted charges recently made in Cleveland, Ohio, by Oscar De Priest, negro representative from Chicago, that he witnessed the lynching of three negroes in Florence shortly before oppression by white persons forced the removal of his parents to Kansas.

J. J. Mitchell, former probate judge of Lauderdale County, said three white robbers were lynched near Florence in 1872, six years before the date De Priest said his family removed to Kansas. C. H. Price, superintendent of the municipal sanitary department, said only one negro had been lynched in Lauderdale County. Price identified the victim as George Ware, who killed a white youth for robbery. The date of the lynching was fixed by Price as the year after the De Priest family left Alabama.

Mrs. T. B. Ingram, daughter of a former owner of Representative De Priest's mother while she was a slave, declared the De Priest family was well liked and denied they ever had been persecuted. She did not recall the lynching of any negroes while De Priest's family resided here.

She was rushed to the Emergency Hospital in Easton, where she died shortly afterward.

Wooters was arrested by Sheriff Thomas J. Faulkner and brought to Easton Jail. He will be given a hearing before Police Justice John W. D. Jump.

Penitentiary Bars King, Wife Slayer

Sheriff Takes Condemned Man to Death-House Ahead of Time.

Columbia, S. C., July 10 (A.P.).—Rafe D. King, under sentence of death for the murder of his wife, Fay Wilson King, was brought to Columbia today, but penitentiary officials refused to receive him, and he was taken back to Chester Jail. Whether King will be brought back to Columbia tomorrow, Sheriff J. E. Howze declined to say.

King, who was sentenced today by Judge J. K. Henry at Chester to die in the electric chair on September 20, was brought here by the sheriff and two deputies within three hours after sentence was pronounced. Prison officials asserted they could not take King until twenty days before the date of the execution without an order from the governor. Gov. John G. Richards was in Washington, and his secretary declined to issue any kind of an order.

King's attorneys have announced that the case will be appealed, which would automatically stay the execution date.

Special to The Washington Post.

Petersburg, Va., July 10.—The State of Maine today had two handsome tablets placed on the monument erected by that State in memory of the men of the First Maine Heavy Artillery who were killed June 18, 1864, in a charge on the Confederate lines from Hares road to Colquetts Salient, in Prince George County. This salient had first been occupied by a portion of the Army of Northern Virginia, which was pouring into Petersburg from Chesterfield County.

The Maine regiment was in Hares sunken road and, seeing the hill opposite occupied, as they supposed, by a small body of men, charged. They were repulsed with a loss of 604 men. One of the tablets contains the names of the men who were killed and the other the names of those who were mortally wounded. The monument, which was erected about the year 1904 at a cost of about $10,000, occupies a site on Hares Hill, about 300 yards from Fort Steadman, where was fought, March 25, 1865, the most sanguinary battle of the nine-month siege of Petersburg, which was evacuated by the Army of Northern Virginia on April 3, 1865.

The tablets were placed on the monument at the request of officials of the State of Maine by Capt. Carter R. Bishop, adjutant of A. P. Hill Camp of Confederate Veterans, of this city.

WOOLEN MILL HEAD CALLED EMBEZZLER

Arthur G. Jones Arrested at Winchester Upon Charge Involving $2,000.

WARRANT FOR TREASURER

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., July 10.—Arthur G. Jones, president and general manager of the Arthur G. Jones Woolen Mills Corporation, arrested today on a warrant specifically charging embezzlement of $2,000 of the firm's funds, was released tonight on $10,000 bond posted by a surety company. A similar warrant was issued simultaneously for the arrest of Marx Krol, former vice president, treasurer and New York selling agent of the corporation, and New York police were asked to take Krol into custody and hold him for extradition papers.

Krol's official connection with the corporation was severed last April but he still is a member of the board of directors. The mill will be closed tomorrow, temporarily, for an audit, it was announced by Burr P. Harrison, counsel for the stockholders and directors, who said Jones is to be removed as manager at the directors' monthly meeting that day and a new manager appointed.

Arrest Follows Checkup.

Jones was in his office at the mill when two policemen entered and served the warrant. He readily agreed to accompany them to city hall. Five hours elapsed before bond was secured. Meanwhile he was under police guard. It was indicated a special grand jury may be called before the regular September corporation court.

The arrest of Jones was said to have been the outcome of an investigation of the corporation's affairs by the stockholders protective committee, which has been under way for several months. The committee a few days ago mailed its report, a voluminous document, to all stockholders and certain creditors. It was learned the corporation owes approximately $200,000 besides its capital stock of $350,000.

Jones, formerly of Janesville, Wis., and Krol came here from Fairmont, W. Va., in 1925, obtained an option on the Winchester Woolen Mills, Inc., and began organization of the present corporation. The mill was subsequently purchased after the minimum amount of capital stock had been subscribed by large numbers of Winchester and Frederick County people, many of whom are said to have invested the bulk of their savings.

Jones Gave Surety Bond.

Preferred stockholders met recently and adopted a resolution authorizing the chairman to appoint a committee to protect their interests and if necessary to bring suit for appointment of a receiver in the name of the persons signing the resolution. Members of the protective committee are H. C. Sheetz, sr., William L. Irwin and Burr P. Harrison, directors, and Charles P. McVicar and Elwood Smith, stockholders.

The committee said it had "made exhaustive investigation of the affairs of the corporation of the manner in which it has been managed in the past, of the ability and integrity of its officers and of its prospects in the future."

It was learned the directors recently demanded that Jones give $25,000 bond as president and general manager which he executed, and similar bond was executed by W. A. Carskadon, chief bookkeeper. The stockholders' committee asked return by Jones and Krol, of common and preferred stock held by them restitution of any sums paid them, "which they are unable to properly explain," institution of a management in the mill of "integrity and ability," and "refund of all dividends received by Jones and Krol on stocks of the corporation which they illegally hold."

Hail and Wind Ruin Much Virginia Fruit

Terrific Storm Sweeps Over the Orchards of Clark County.

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., July 10.—Severe damage was done late today by a terrific hail and wind storm sweeping over Clark County, according to motorists who arrived in battered cars that had borne the brunt of the storm. Most telephone lines were out of commission.

Extensive damage was reported in a number of immense apple and peach orchards. The hailstorm lasted nearly half an hour and fell in such quantities and size as to blockade roadways. Highways were also strewn with large shade trees that had been twisted or uprooted and many service lines and poles were leveled by cyclonic winds. Hundreds of acres of corn were beaten flat, and thousands of bushels of apples and peaches were either blown off the trees along with leaves or pelted so severely they cannot be profitably marketed, it was said.

NINE MISSIONARIES SPEAK

Special to The Washington Post.

Frederick, Md., July 10.—Enrollment for the Blue Mountain Conference at Hood College passed the 200 mark today. Others are expected tomorrow and Friday, and by the end of the week the attendance probably will be 250. Notwithstanding the warm weather all of the study classes were well attended. "Office hours" were held on the campus in the evening.

The principal address tonight was made by the Rev. William B. Spofford, executive secretary of the Church League for Industrial Democracy. The Rev. Malcolm E. Peabody, of Philadelphia, presided at a meeting at which nine missionaries—three from China, three from the mountains of Virginia, and one each from the Philippines, Japan and Mexico—were introduced and made brief remarks. Opportunity for missionary work, home and abroad, was stressed.

Reference was made to the work in the different fields and the view held by many persons to the effect that missionary work is expensive and productive of small results was combated by facts given by the speakers.

Bishop Unable to Attend.

A telegram was received from the Right Rev. Walter H. Overs, Jamestown, N. Y., president of the conference and retired bishop of the missionary district of Liberia, stating that he has not been able to attend the conference. While it is hoped that he will arrive later his telegram was taken to indicate that he may not be able to attend this year. Bishop Overs is highly regarded by the confrence officials, who feel disappointed over his inability to be present.

Deaconness Frances Rose Edwards, secretary for curriculum, department of religious education, assisted by Miss Helen Washburn, of Philadelphia, conducted a study period for children. A large group also attended the study period under the direction of the Rev. Frederick Fleming, rector of St. Stephen's Church, Providence, R. I. This study embraces a course in the faith and practice of the church as set forth in the Book of Common Prayer. Essential elements of worship, distinctiveness of Christian worship, relation of faith and practice offices and service and the devotional life of a Christian, both public and private.

School Open to All.

While the school is primarily for those who come for special study of religious drama, it is open to all members of the conference. It includes study for the production of plays and rehearsals for a pageant to be given at the end of the conference session.

Tomorrow evening a missionary exhibit will be given by Mrs. Mercellin C. Adams. No evening meeting will be held Friday. Saturday evening Dr. Larkin H. Glazebrooks is scheduled for a message from the commission of evangelism and the service on Sunday evening will be conducted by the Rev. C. Leslie Glenn, secretary for college work, department of religious education of the national council.

Dr. Lewis B. Franklin will speak on the advance work program the evening of July 15 and no special program is set for the following evening.

A pageant will be given under the direction of Miss Higgins, head of the school of religious drama, next Wednesday evening and the final service the following evening will be conducted by the chaplain, the Rev. John W. Suter, jr., executive secretary of the department of religious education.

The sunset services the last week of the conference will be conducted by the Rev. C. Leslie Glenn. These services this week are led by the Rev. Frederic C. Fleming.

FREDERICK AIRPORT SITE PICKED BY U.S.

Field to Be Used in Emergency on the Air Mail Route to Cleveland.

Special to The Washington Post.

Frederick, Md., July 10.—Option was closed yesterday by Mayor Culler on a site of 94 acres adjoining the city for a government airport. The purchase was agreed upon after Thomas Bourne, representing the Department of Commerce in Washington, looked over the two sites which were under option. While both locations were pronounced suitable, the Purman-Kemp farm site appealed more to Mr. Bourne and he recommended it. The cost of the site is $27,600. Mr. Bourne said the location is one of the most practical in the east from the standpoint of future development.

A survey of the boundaries of the field will be made within the next few days. In addition to highway and water facilities, the location also is near the electric power lines. It is understood the city officials will take up with the Potomac Edison Co. heads the matter of either lowering the companies' high tension wires in that immediate section or else putting them underground.

Equipping of the field by the Government will begin at an early date, it was stated. The field is to be used as an emergency landing field in connection with an air mail route between Washington and Cleveland by way of Pittsburgh. At Cleveland the line joins the Transcontinental Air Mail Service. The city airport is to be leased to the Department of Commerce for the sum of $1 per year. All equipment and improvement operations, however, will be borne by the Government. The field will be equipped with floodlights and a big beacon fitted on to a 50-foot tower.

The lights will be in operation every night, the controlling device consisting of an astronomical clock. A caretaker will be maintained on the field by the government. While the airport will be an emergency landing field for the air mail pilots, it is expected to bring considerable aerial trafic to this city inasmuch as aviators usually follow established air mail routes. Mr. Bourne, who flew to Frederick from Washington, continued to wing his way to Pittsburgh, inspecting the various flying fields en route. He is to return to Frederick tomorrow in connection with further preparation of the city's newly acquired air field, looking to the establishment of the new air mail route in the fall. Discussing the new air mail route with the mayor and aldermen, Mr. Bourne said he believed it would become one of the most important of the mail routes operated by the government.

Virginia Increases Acreage in Cotton

Richmond, Va., July 10 (A.P.).—The cotton acreage in Virginia this year is estimated to be 89,000 acres, or 10 per cent greater than the acreage of last year, it is announced in the State cotton report prepared by Henry M. Taylor, State-Federal agricultural statistician, from data obtained through the Federal-State crop reporting service.

Increased acreage in cotton is reported in all cotton growing sections of the State, with the greatest increase being along the northern and western edge of the cotton district. The report said that weather conditions during June were only fairly favorable for cotton, as cool nights have retarded growth.

The estimated acreage for the United States is 48,457,000 acres, or an increase of 3.2 per cent above the acreage planted last year. The increase in acreage has taken place in the States from Alabama west. The eastern part of the belt shows only slight changes from last year. No report on the condition of the 1929 cotton crop will be prepared until August 1.
